BALLOTING TO BEGIN PROBABLY ON FRIDAY

Rules Prescribe That Party Platform Must Be Adopted Before Voting on Aspirants Starts.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

New York, June 25.—The deep, swift currents of democratic rivalry and dissension burst their dykes today in Madison Square Garden and engulfed the party's national convention with a bellowing wave of confusion and disorder.

The Ku Klux Klan issue, brought at last to the open floor of the convention, set off an anti-klan demonstration that swept the great hall like a tornado and led to several fist fights among delegates, but apparently brought the question no nearer a solution.

Reaching the stage of receiving nominations for the presidency, the convention also was shown in an hour's demonstration for William G. McAdoo visible proof of the organized and driving power of the forces that the at work to influence the selection of a nominee.

Nominate Smith Today.

The name of Governor Alfred Smith, of New York, will be presented tomorrow and his campaign organization was preparing tonight a convention floor parade designed to outlast and outdo that accorded today to his leading rival. Nominating speeches for all the other candidates are expected to conclude before tomorrow night, but there will be no balloting before Friday or Saturday.

Moving swiftly through its routine preliminaries, the convention today perfected its permanent organization, accorded two prolonged demonstrations to its permanent chairman, Senator Walsh, of Montana, the Teapot Dome prosecutor, and disposed of all its duties except adoption of the party platform and selection of the nominees.

Platform Makers Work.

The klan and other debated subjects tonight held in continuous session a platform subcommittee appointed to comb over a vast collection of suggestions and advice and weld what is found acceptable into a declaration of principles on which the whole party can stand united.

There were indications that the subcommittee would not recommend that the klan be named specifically in the platform, but this tentative decision will be subject to review by the full platform committee and probably will be settled finally after a fight in the convention itself. On foreign relations it is the present purpose of the subcommittee to reaffirm specifically the party's belief that the United States should be a member of the league of nations. The prohibition issue was disposed of by the subcommitteemen during the day by a decision to declare for law enforcement without mention of the eighteenth amendment or the Volstead act.

Start Roll Calls Friday.

Convention officials hope the platform will be ready for submission by Friday morning, nder the rules, it must be adopted by the convention before voting begins on presidential candidates and if no prolonged floor fight develops on the controverted planks it is possible the first roll calls on presidential candidates will be reached before adjournment Friday night.

In all about 20 candidates are to be formally presented to the convention and only three of nominating speeches were heard today. Alabama, heading the roll of states, placed in

Cummings and Pittman Are Appointed To Put Planks in Final Form for Submission.

Here's What Committee Did Up To Midnight

New York, June 25.—Late tonight the planks agreed upon by the platform subcommittee, provided:

Law enforcement, omitting specific mention of prohibition.

A federal corrupt practices act.

Federal regulation and control of the anthracite coal industry and of other corporations or combinations controlling the necessities of life.

Immediate independence for the Philippines.

Enactment of legislation to prohibit the "watering" of stock.

Denunciation of Lausanne treaty with Turkey.

An agricultural plank, embodying the Curtis-Aswell bill, but going beyond that, also was approved. Besides declaring for governmental stimulation of cooperative marketing, it proposes revision of the tariff, reduction of rail and water transportation rates and establishment of an export marketing corporation or commission to aid the farmer and to obtain for agriculture equality with other industries.

New York, June 26.—Alternative proposals on both the Ku Klux Klan issue and the league of nations will be presented today to the platform committee of the democratic national convention by the eleven members appointed to work out a tentative draft of the party declaration.

This announcement was made by Chairman Cummings after the subcommittee had been in session for more than eleven hours. Mr. Cummings and Senator Pittman, of Nevada, were appointed to put the various planks into final form for submission to the committee of eleven at 11 o'clock today.

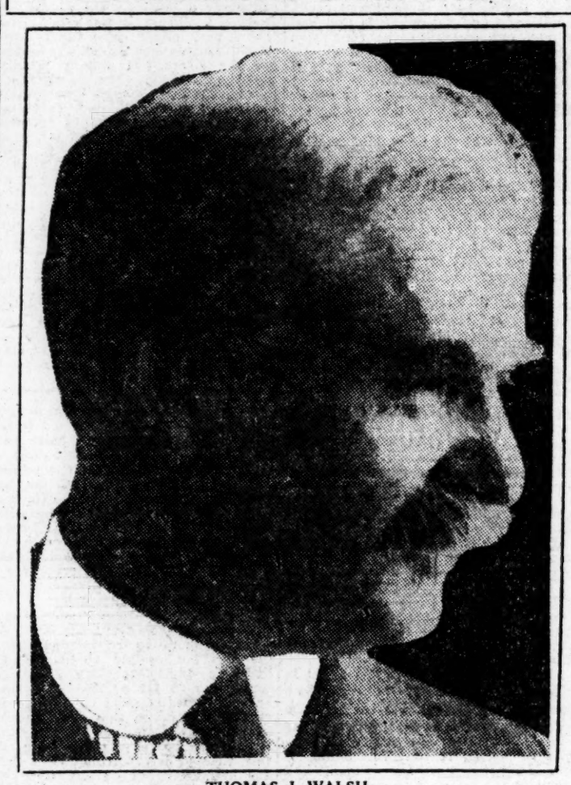

The subcommittee will make its report in the afternoon, with the expectation that the entire committee will be able to present a complete draft to the convention Friday. Whether there are to be fights on the convention floor on the two paramount issues remains with the entire committee.

New York, June 25.—Closeted in a secluded room on a side street far from party headquarters, eleven men sat late today to write a platform for the democratic national convention.

Admittedly they had before them an all-night job, and even they were doubtful that they could produce a

LEGISLATORS SHOW MID-SEASON FORM ON OPENING DAY

Annual Jumble of New Measures Begins—Short Sessions in Both Houses Mark Opening.

With half a dozen important new bills already introduced, and several leading issues ready for action as unfinished business from last year, the Georgia legislature faces today the second day of its 1924 session, a program of work which reads like a day of mid-session.

In addition to the scheduled work today the governor will deliver his annual message. On Wednesday night he expected to deliver this in person at a joint session, probably about noon. It is not expected that there will be anything of new import in the governor's message, inasmuch as he placed himself on record last year on the various legislative proposals. The message this year is, therefore, expected to be merely general in terms and without any definite proposals on any of the issues before the assembly.

While the order of business in the lower house has not been definitely decided, there is a meeting of the rules committee called for this morning at 9:30 o'clock and it was generally predicted that the bill to place motor bus lines in the state under the supervision of the public service commission would be placed at the head of the calendar. This bill passed the senate last year but was defeated in the house. It was brought up again Wednesday on a motion to reconsider, which motion was passed.

Several New Bills.

Among new bills introduced in the house Wednesday, the opening day, was the highway bond measure, introduced by Representative Mann, of Glynn county, providing for a statewide bond issue of $40,000,000 to be used in the construction of a state system of permanent hard-surfaced roads.

Representative Arnold, of Lumpkin, introduced bills providing for four-year terms for state house officers, including the governor, and providing for reduction in personnel of the assembly on a general reapportionment plan which would make the house membership number 51 and the senate 12.

In the senate bills were introduced

New York, June 25.—The American people will be on trial before the world in the coming presidential campaign, Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, declared today in an address upon assuming the permanent chairmanship of the democratic national convention.

The issue, he asserted, will be whether they will continue in power the party now in control of the government notwithstanding the scandals which have been disclosed in senate investigations.

Davis, Ralston or Robinson

:: CARAWAY ELIMINATES M'ADOO AND SMITH ::

To Carry Standard of Party

BY THADDEUS H. CARAWAY.
U. S. Senator From Arkansas.

Madison Square Garden, June 25.—Out of the welter of the second day of the convention have emerged three names, one of which will be at the head of the ticket which the democratic party hopes to elect next November.

Those names are Ralston, Davis and Robinson.

The personal animosity engendered by the rival ambitions of McAdoo and Smith definitely have put those two heretofore leading contestants out of the race. Despite the hubbub of preconvention drum thumping, the bitterness prevailing between the Smith and McAdoo camps has not found a permanent home among the vast majority of the delegates.

Barring the handicap of hailing from south of the Mason and Dixon line, Joe Robinson, senior senator from Arkansas, could obtain the nomination when the desertion from the ranks of the numerical leaders begins.

But his southern domicile is a stiff hurdle and if Robinson cannot negotiate it the nomination lies between John W. Davis and Governor Samuel Ralston, of Indiana.

Of the two, Ralston has the stronger position. His attitude of dignified aloofness has won him the respect of delegates who are disgusted with the personalities and villifications thrown into the fight by other leaders.

Ralston will fit the platform that we on the resolutions subcommittee are considering and discussing. The convention surface bitterness is not reflected among the men who are drafting the democratic statement of principles.

When our labors are completed we shall have a brief and succinct document upon which Ralston, Davis or Robinson can stand and win.

McAdoo's bolt was shot with the pre-arranged demonstration which greeted his name when it was put into nomination. Smith's chances will blaze and fade to nothing within the space occupied by the carefully stage-managed outcry which will be raised in his honor when the convention has heard the speech which puts him in nomination.

So far the convention has been almost as cut and dried as was the republican gathering at Cleveland. That phase must take its course. When the prescribed course has been run and the formalities completed, the real convention lightning will begin to flicker and flash about the heads of Davis, Robinson, of Arkansas, and Ralston, of Indiana.

ALMOST NO CHANGE VISIBLE IN LINEUPS DESPITE EFFORTS

Battle Has Resolved Itself Into Grim Struggle of Both Sides To Hold Their Delegates.

NEW YORK POISONED ON M'ADOO CLAIMS

Fight of the World So Bitter That Reaction May Have Set in His Favor.

BY MARK SULLIVAN

New York, June 25.—While the delegates and the crowd were in Madison Square Garden, attracted by the formal opening ceremonies of the convention, the leaders remained in the hotels, intent on the great purpose that will eventuate with the balloting Friday. The McAdoo leaders are less busy than the anti-McAdoo ones. There is not much the McAdoo leaders can do. Their present need is merely to hold their lines and this they seem able to do readily.

The writer, with some familiarity with the various delegations, does not believe there has been a net change of as much as ten delegates, out of 1,098 in the relative proportions of McAdoo and anti-McAdoo, since the week began. With the McAdoo leaders, it is largely a case of keeping in touch with their delegates. They do it easily and well, for the McAdoo forces include those who have exuberant ardor. The women in the McAdoo forces are especially ardent. They make it their business to call on the women delegates from every state and the impression they make is helpful to their cause. If any additions are being made at all to the McAdoo delegates, they are among the women.

The anti-McAdoo leaders, on the other hand, have occasion for rather more work. Not that they need to work hard in order to hold their delegations. The anti-McAdoo people are not losing strength to speak of. But the anti-McAdoo leaders have ahead of them the necesity of agreeing upon a plan, upon a floor leader and all that sort of thing.

More Discipline In Antis.

Speaking generally, there is more discipline among the anti-McAdoo delegates. They are easier for their leaders to handle. The Smith delegates, particularly, combining groups like the 90 from New York, the 45 from Illinois and the 45 from Pennsylvania, are accustomed to discipline. This compactness will make them easier to handle in the excitement of the moment when the thunders begin to roll in the convention hall under conditions of actual balloting.

The fight for control of the atmosphere, for control of the psychology of the situation, so to speak, continues every minute. There are all sorts of devices to affect the morals

Upshaw Tells New York How To Rebuke the Devil

New York, June 25.—William D. Upshaw, of Georgia, who spent Sunday campaigning in the churches, was busy today trying to line up votes from the dry states for his candidacy.

"It is the only way, brother," he said, "to rebuke the devil, the brewers and the distillers who would lead this convention away from the paths of righteousness."

Upshaw made no claims, but insisted that the drys and "God-fearing men and women" in the convention would have to vote for him, asserting that he is the only simon-pure, blown-in-the-bottle dry candidate and therefore entitled to their consideration.

WARRANTS CHARGE KIDNAPING OF GIRL TO STATE BANKER

H. W. Cook, 60, of Defunct Fairburn Bank, Missing With 17-Year-Old Daughter of Tenant.

Fairburn, Ga., June 25.—(Special.) H. W. Cook, about 60, wealthy director of the defunct Bank of Campbell County, and a member of city council, is being sought in Denver and points on the Pacific coast tonight, following the issuance of a warrant by Campbell county officials charging him with kidnaping Agnes Purmort, pretty 17-year-old daughter of a tenant on one of his farms. Cook has a wife and family here.

The search was directed westward following receipt of unsigned postal cards said to have been written by him. The cards were received by T. W. Camp and James C. Reid, according to reports here. Cook is alleged to have disappeared June 17.

Judge J. Wilson Parker issued the warrant charging kidnaping to Cook. Others charging larceny will be issued later, it was said tonight.

According to information given Judge Parker, the young woman joined Cook at Pyrone, a small station in Campbell county.

Cook is reported to have taken between $10,000 and $15,000 in cash with him when he left his home here ostensibly to go to his farm in Fayette county. He is reported to have gone to a plantation in Cherokee county instead. Just before he left, he is said to have sold a quantity of cotton to cotton dealers of Atlanta.

The Campbell county bank went into the hands of a receiver when Cook and other directors took in too much paper, officers said. State banking officials are now in charge of the affairs of the institution.

The missing man was agent for the American Agricultural and Chemical company and had large interests in this and neighboring counties.

Cook is a member of one of the oldest and most prominent families in this section of the state. His holdings are valued at more than $225,000. J. H. McClure, of Fairburn, has been appointed receiver of his estate.

Florida Sheriff Slays Englishman Believed Insane

Latter Was Convict Escaped From London Jail Several Years Ago.

Albert George Bowes, an Englishman, who recently bought a small home and established his residence at Mayo, Fla., near Live Oak, was shot and killed by W. H. Lyle, sheriff of Suwanee county, Florida, recently after he had wounded one man, shot at several others and drawn his pistol on the party of officers who pursued him, according to belated reports reaching Atlanta.

The sheriff said he was sent for to go to Rossburg settlement near Live Oak, where a strange man had shot and wounded H. C. Mathis and fired on Norman Brannan without effect. When Sheriff Lyle, with several deputies, reached the scene, he found Mayo with a bullet wound below the heart.

John Lanier and Will Wilson, who were shot at by the same man, directed the officers in the search for the assailant, who was found a few hours later in a field on the farm of Rone Ross, where he had just shot several times at George Ross, the sheriff said.

As soon as he saw the officers, ac-

GEORGIA STANDARD RIVETED TO FLOOR BY KLAN FRIENDS

Spontaneous Demonstration of Anti-Klan Forces Was Real Feature of Third Convention Day.

POLITICAL POWER OF KLAN DOOMED

Underwood Anti-Klan Plank Will Be Adopted If Fight Is Brought Out Onto Floor.

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON.

Convention Hall, New York, June 25.—The outstanding feature of today's convention proceedings, of course, was the wild, unrestrained and spontaneous outbursts in opposition to the interference of the Ku Klux Klan as a secret and invisible factor in national democratic politics.

This was the first flash of electricity in the formal proceedings always necessary during the first two days of a convention. Another outstanding feature might be claimed for the 55-minute McAdoo demonstration following the nominating speech of ex-Senator Phelan, of California, but this was carefully staged, as are all demonstrations in conventions for leading pre-convention candidates.

Anti-Klan Move Spontaneous.

Not so, however, with the anti-klan outburst. Forney Johnson, of Alabama, who made a truly great and gripping nominating address for Senator Oscar Underwood, was of the best heard in recent years in a national convention of either party. He reached the klan part of his address without equivocation or timidity and it was like putting a lighted match to a powder magazine. He declared that his candidate was firmly of the opinion that the issue of religious liberty guaranteed by the constitution should be reaffirmed and that while he did not object to, but encouraged secret fraternal organizations, the insidious influences of invisible government in American life must be stopped and the democratic party should go before the people squarely in opposition to the political activities of the Ku Klux Klan and be not afraid to call it by name.

Name Was Spark.

The utterance of the name was the lighted spark. Instantly the standards of a number of states were in the aisles of the pit as the band struck up "America" and then the "Star Spangled Banner" and swung into

ANCIENT FACTIONS IN BATTLE ARRAY

North and South Again Aligned Against Each Other on Ku Klux Klan Question.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

New York, June 25.—Crashing through the conspiracy of silence which had been decreed by convention leaders on the Ku Klux Klan, the democratic national convention by an explosion Wednesday has brought the question to a crisis.

This convention has been split into two bitter factions and it will not adjourn now until the issue is fought out to the end.

It is a crisis the like of which has not been seen since the days of slavery. Like that issue, it rests on the old, old race question. And it finds the northern wing of the party arrayed in bitter hostility to the klan south. This was disclosed when the convention went into a riot over a denunciation of the klan by Fordney Johnson during a speech placing Senator Oscar Underwood in nomination.

Other Developments.

Other outstanding developments Wednesday were:

One—An hour's demonstration for McAdoo when his name was placed in nomination.

Two—Drive for second choice pledges by friends of Samuel M. Ralston, of Indiana.

PARADE FOR M'ADOO IS CAREFULLY STAGED

Four Girl Trumpeters Give Signal To Start Parade and Help Stave Off Smith Inroads.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

New York, June 25.—Shirt-sleeved and sweltering, the hosts of the democracy gave themselves up today to nominations and noise.

More of both are to come. Also, probably, more of the sticky heat that "makes your bloomin' eyebrows crawl" in the heavy, lifeless air of the drab, though flag-wrapped, old Madison Square Garden.

But if volume of sound is any criterion of the probable volume of democratic ballots next November, the party ought to be satisfied with today's augury. They made noise enough, first and last, to pale the violent thunderstorm, which came later to cool the sweating city, into an insignificant rumble.

Some of the noise in convention hall was impromptu and heated with more than atmospheric conditions. Some of it was planned, but all of it was noise of the noisiest kind.

Vote To Adjourn Noisiest.

And the loudest, gladdest and most welcomed cry of the day was the stentorian "aye" with which delegates joined in voting an end to the tumult.

It all started off in most decorous fashion. Convention business was dispatched quickly and with a cheerful harmony and the permanent chairman, Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, introduced by his Mississippi colleague, Pat Harrison, as the greatest investigator in the world, came in for a rousing welcome. His arraignment of republican shortcomings brought loud applause and then the convention rolled swiftly along into the real business for which it is called, the nomination of a party standard bearer.

Everybody knew who was to come first when the roll of states was called and Forney Johnston, of Alabama, climbed the rostrum to place the name of Senator Oscar W. Underwood, of that state, on the ballot.

Klan Denunciation Bitter.

Not all the delegates were prepared for what was to follow, however, and when Johnston reached the point in his address where he dealt bluntly with the issue of organized political conspiracies, hatched in secret, they began to take a new interest in what he was saying.

It was blazing hot by now, out on the vast floor of the hall. At first, under clear skies, a half acre of glass skylight had been shoved aside and the bunting and flags of the ceiling canopy drawn back to give a fine and

Atlanta---"The Wrist To Five Fingers"

¶ It was General Sherman who described the strategic position of Atlanta by comparing the site of this city to the wrist of a hand whose fingers stretched to the five principal ports of the Gulf and South Atlantic Coast.

¶ Twice the selection of this site has been approved in the stern test of war and twice upon this spot has been built a city.

¶ A position so strategic naturally offers opportunities highly inviting to merchants and advertisers seeking today for a point of vantage for their manufacturing, sales and distribution.

¶ Many a commercial success has been directed from Atlanta as campaign headquarters and since 1868 The Atlanta Constitution has been broadcasting the messages of Atlanta and its advertisers down along the wrist and through the great hand to the tips of the five fingers.

cooling view of the far blue above with its shifting cloud masses. Up there, looking down into the hall, was a squat, dingy, ginger-bread-work tower on the old hall. Probably many a delegate saw it for the first time as from the streets about it is insignificant against the background of mighty and modern skyscrapers grouped in the famous profile of the Manhattan skyline.

Sun Was Fervid.

But the sun was not slow to find that high entrance to the crowded hall. He poured down his most fervid rays on the sweating delegates below and coats and even collars and neckties began to vanish from view. A wide torrid zone of direct, burning sunlight stripped the great hall from end to end and crept gradually southward to include the platform in its fervid and unwelcome embrace. Within that zone straw hats blossomed out again on their owners' heads despite the conventions and presently a woman delegate resorted to a Japanese parasol for protection.

Johnston pounded away on his denunciation of secret intrigue and even the folks in the tropical climate of sun-swept belt forgot their discomfort.

Finally he hurled at them directly the flat, unvarnished repudiation of the Ku Klux Klan which Senator Underwood favors as a party platform plank and a roar of approbation shook the hall.

Dive Out Into Aisles.

It came chiefly from adherents of Governor Al Smith, of New York. They howled with glee and challenged anti-Smith delegations to join them.

Not content with mere noise they plunged out into the aisles with the state standards swaying and bobbing aloft. And right there trouble started among some divided delegations.

The Missouri group holds front seats in this convention. The tall staff of the state standard rears up directly in front of the speakers' bridge that centers the platform. A husky Missourian decorated with a Smith button grabbed the staff and sought to join the march. A group of McAdoo supporters in the delegation fought him back, one gray-haired woman clinging to it as it rocked in the struggle for possession.

The McAdoo faction controlled and the staff held its place, a monstrous New York policeman finally intervening to see that it was undisturbed. Not until then did the fighting ardor of the lady from Missouri permit her to surrender her grip.

McAdoo Men on Guard.

But meanwhile a ruction had broken out about the Colorado standard and the McAdoo forces in other groups that will vote under unit rules were on guard, clustered about their standards.

The Colorado row waxed fast and furious while the demonstrating delegates howled with glee. A big man was fighting to get the state standard up and into the procession while half a dozen others fought him back. He was overcome by sheer weight finally and went down dragging the standard down with him, its tall staff snapped off in the struggle, the white card bearing the word Colorado in big black letters ripped away from its metal frame. The vacant framework got around the neck of the raider finally, and he fought to get free of its grip.

Meanwhile, more peaceable confusion was in progress elsewhere all over the hall, and the balleries were booming out indications of their Smith sympathies. It went on uproariously with Johnston leaning back waiting for an opportunity to add the few words he still had to say—the actual namig of his candidate.

Put Flags in Parade.

Finally, the demonstration, under the leadership of the band, swung into the strains of "America," the New York delegation climbing on chairs and facing toward seated McAdoo men to hurl "Sweet Land of Liberty" at them in roaring defiance. National flags along the platform rail were ripped from their places to be carried up and down the aisles in the procession.

Under the pound of the gavel, quiet gradually was restored and Johnston got Underwood's name into the record for the first time. It brought a loyal greeting from the Alabama delegation and the New Yorkers stood up to give a complimentary cheer as well. But it was anti-climax and over in a few minutes, with the stage cleared for former Governor C. H. Brough, of Arkansas, to put Senator Joe Robinson of that state in nomination.

It was evident that the convention did not take the Robinson nomination very seriously, at least at this stage of the proceedings. There was applause but no particular demonstration was attempted in his behalf and the delegates were plainly waiting to see what would happen when California, next in line, launched the real battle with the nomination of William Gibbs McAdoo.

McAdoo Men Set Stage.

Chairman Walsh called former Senator James D. Phelan to the stand and the Californians took that for the signal to start a preliminary burst. Red starred and banded, "bear" flags of the "California republic," now the state flag, leaped up among the McAdoo supporters and there was a considerable tumult and a lot of shouting before Phelan could begin his job. Meanwhile, McAdoo captains were busy everywhere circulating flags and rainbow color silk handkerchiefs and all sorts of appliances to be used when their man actually was named.

Phelan got going finally and proceeded with an elaborate review of the character and qualifications of the former treasury secretary. There was continual commotion on the floor and preparations for the coming demonstration went forward, and Senator Walsh was twice forced to interrupt the speaker and demand order.

The nominating speech was long and there were signs of restlessness before it was finished. McAdoo hosts were plainly set to go and eager to start.

Georgia Woman Stops Him.

Finally, a feminine voice from the loyal McAdoo Georgia delegation called on the speaker to name his man, saying "We know his record."

Phelan complied and as he shouted "William Gibbs McAdoo" at the battery of microphones before him, a shrieking roar of sound went up that was not to die away completely or even to lessen materially for more than an hour. Flags swung up everywhere, the bear flags, national flags, and streamers, brilliant colored silk scarfs were tossed aloft and led by the California and Georgia legions and loyally supported by the leather-lunged and non-partisan bandsmen in their high crows' nest, the McAdoo delegates surged out into the milling parade of the aisles that marks such occasions in political conventions.

A rooter group was unmasked in a high gallery, barking a chant in drum time of "Mac, Mac. Mac, will do," over and over again. The band roared away at "California, Here I Come," with the thudding clamor of the big bass drum pounding out its rhythmic barbaric notes. Delegates clashed in imitation of locomotive whistles and whistles tooted like the same locomotive blowing for a crossing.

Girl Rides Through Aisle.

Down in the aisles the California delegation had shouldered a girl clad like Miss Columbia and waving a California flag. She was carried again and again around the hall by sweating relays of bearers. Behind her came a quartet of white robed women trying to make their silver trumpets heard in the din. Once in a while the sound of their music came faintly out of the general jumble of sound.

A long white placard on tall poles was unfurled by two women of the California group. It carried the legend, "California for Wilson, 1916, for McAdoo, 1924," and the women who carried it never faltered or let it down in all the hot, stifling hour or more of surging through the jammed aisles that followed.

On and on the din went, never seeming to waver in volume. A white-hatted yell leader bobbed up on the platform and sought frantically to establish an understanding with the rooting force in the gallery. His megaphone was useless and his shrill whistle signals never got beyond the first few rows of delegates.

Smith Men Cheer.

A girl in yellow, big and blonde, climbed to the speakers' reading stand itself and time after time the bearers of Miss Columbia sought to crash their way to the same point of vantage, succeeding only after half a dozen charges at the platform doorway.

The other delegations, even the big New York group, were on their chairs by now watching the show. Presently, out of the general confusion of McAdoo noise emerged the sound of a "Smith, Smith—Smith-Smith-Smith," drum chant. Floor Leader Franklin D. Roosevelt, of the Smith campaign, confined by his crippled condition to his easy chair on the flank of the New Yorkers, sought to stop it and was told it had started in the galleries. It had only served to excite the McAdoo shouters, however.

Later an anti-McAdoo wit with a megaphone roared out an "Oil, Oil, Oil will do," version of the McAdoo drum chant loud enough to be heard once or twice, but otherwise the McAdoo demonstration went unmolested.

Colorado Suffers Again.

At the ill-starred Colorado standard, now given hasty first aid treatment by hall carpenters and fitted with a new handle, another rumpus broke out.

Governor Sweet, of that state, state, sought to get it into action but was promptly stopped and the standard again was wrecked by the charge of a half-dozen anti-McAdoo folks from Colorado.

Up in the Missouri line a ladies' and gentlemen's agreement not to parade the standard in any demonstration held good, except for a few quickly checked waggles of the big placard. The agreement did not run to noise, however, and half a dozen Missouri ladies, mounted on their chairs, continued to inform the convention, time after time, they, the "west and south, are for McAdoo," and that the same regions didn't get "scared when the east says boo."

Mrs. McAdoo Is Center.

The demonstrators finally discovered Mrs. McAdoo in a draped box at the back of the hall opposite the center of the stand. The girl in yellow posted herself beside the box and the surging, swaying, sweating throng in the aisles made that a center of special noise on each round. Mrs. McAdoo accepted it smiling, standing in the box and still dressed in mourning for her father, Woodrow Wilson.

General Manager Rockwell, of the McAdoo battle lines, finally sought to quell the noise, getting to the stand and waving to the crowd below to silence. It gave him no attention whatever. A little later, however, by agreement, a motion to recess was shouted into the din and seconded and when Senator Walsh put the question the heroic size of the "aye" whihc carried it, while coming chiefly from the New York and other Smith groups, showed that everybody was ready to quit.

AMERICA INVITED TO ATTEND PARLEY

London, June 25.—(By the Associated Press.)—The United States will be invited to send a representative to the proposed allied conference in London in July in any capacity the American government thinks fit. Japan will be included among the nations invited.

It is hoped Premier Mussolini of Italy will be able to represent his nation in person at the conference.

Invitations are being prepared by the British government.

KELLOGG INSTRUCTED TO ATTEND PARLEY.

Washington, June 25.—Ambassador Kellogg at London was instructed today to attend the forthcoming premiers' conference to discuss execution of the Dawes' plan.

His appointment was announced in a white house statement, which said that Mr. Kellogg would attend the conference "for the purpose of dealing with such matters as affect the interests of the United States and otherwise for purposes of information."

This action was determined upon after the state department had been advised by the ambassador that an invitation for the United States to participate had been handed the American embassy in London. The white house statement declared that it was "the desire of the administration that the Dawes' plan should be put into effect as speedily as possible."

Colonel James A. Logan, who has been American observer with the reparation commission at Paris, will also go to London to assist the ambassador at the conference.

CHARLIE MURPHY IS SUCCEEDED BY RABBI WISE

New York, June 25.—Rabbi Stephen S. Wise has been appointed to membership in the New York state democratic delegation, filling the vacancy created by the death of Charles F. Murphy, celebrated Tammany chieftain. The announcement was made tonight from the residence of Franklin D. Roosevelt, convention floor leader of the delegation.

It was understood that Rabbi Wise was selected, in the first place, because he represented geographically the congested East Side district of New York city and, secondly, because of his noted ability as an orator.

The delegation, as formerly made up, lacked ready and able floor speakers and it was felt by some that the Tammany chieftain's vacancy made it possible for this situation to be overcome.

nomination Senator Oscar W. Underwood. Arizona had no nomination to present, and Arkansas presented the name of Senator Joseph T. Robinson.

California's nomination of Mr. McAdoo and the demonstration in his behalf brought the day's proceedings to a close.

Connecticut Yields.

When the convention reconvenes tomorrow morning, Colorado will nominate Governor W. E. Sweet, and then when the name of Connecticut is called, its delegation will yield to New York for presentation of the name of Governor Smith.

It was a denunciation of the klan by Forney Johnston, of Birmingham, in his speech nominating Senator Underwood, that threw the convention into its first open manifestation of disagreement.

Throughout his pre-convention campaign the Alabama senator had waged unrelenting war on the klan and since he came to New ork, he has made public the anti-klan plank he would like to see in the platform.

Mr. Johnston read the vigorous phrases of this plank to the convention and its response was as prompt as it was dramatic.

Lasted 20 Minutes.

Sending up a shout that came as from a single throat, the delegations from several anti-klan states poured into the aisles to begin a parade around the hall. Gathering momentum as they went, they tore from the walls and railings clusters of American flags to carry aloft in their militancy, and took up for their marching songs, "The Star Spangled Banner" and "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

It was 20 minutes before order could be restored.

A number of states refused en masse to join in the demonstration, and in two or three delegations where sentiment was divided, there were tussles between delegates who sought to take the standards of their states into the parade, and those who sought to prevent it.

McAdoo Stage Was Set.

When quiet had been restored, Mr. Johnston concluded his speech, and former Governor Charles H. Brough, of Arkansas, presented the name of Senator Robinson. He was applauded from many parts of the hall and the Arkansas delegation stood on its chairs and cheered, but there was no effort at a prolonged demonstration.

The nominating speech for Mr. McAdoo was made by former Senator James D. Phelan, of California. Long before he took the platform the machinery for a demonstration had been set up on the convention floor, and at the mention of the name of the former treasury secretary, it all came into action.

A group of women trumpeters blew a clarion call from the midst of the California delegation; two men lifted to their shoulders a girl dressed in the national colors and bore her to the head of the fast-forming parade. A cheer leader took his place at the speaker's stand and scores of colored bandanas and California state flags presented to delegates and workers were brought into play as the show got under way.

No Growth of Strength.

It was impossible to estimate how many delegates took part in the hour's demonstration. Among the marchers were many who wore no badges to identify them and a group of these gathered in front of the speaker's stand and kept whooping it up for McAdoo after most of the delegates were back in their places. The band, too, and a group of McAdoo boosters stationed in the gallery, carried the demonstration along for a time, while most of the rest of the hall was quiet.

There was nothing on the surface tonight to indicate that this or any other development of the day had affected the relative standing of the candidates. Both the McAdoo and Smith forces, each predicting victory, kept up their canvass for votes, while the friends of all the other candidates continued to smile complacently at the prospect of a deadlock.

Sport Cheers Weak and Puny

:: CONVENTION WARCRIES ENDURING AS GRANITE ::

Compared to Political 'Wow'

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

New York, June 25.—When an elderly party with a nude scalp and a series of chins leaps off his seat as though someone had set fire to his pants, opens a mouth the size of a manhole and yells "Wow!" and keeps on yelling "Wow!" for an hour and two minutes, you begin to wonder if there isn't something in this political game that doesn't meet the apprentice eye.

There is such a thing as being too skeptical about the other man's sport. The time was when a man going down the street in bloomers with a golf bag on his shoulders was followed by a jeering rabble and a boy with a tennis racket was hailed with such insulting salutations as "Yoo hoo, sweetheart, give us a kiss."

Never this correspondent to swat a sport that he knows nothing about. Politics may turn out to be quite a racket and he may wish to run for something beside the 5:15.

After several seasons of covering prize fights, boat races, horse races, tennis and golf tournaments and ball games, one comes to the conclusion that there are two kinds of cheers, the Bronx cheer, or raspberry, and the other kind.

The Bronx cheer consists of "Boo! Boo! Throw the dirty bum out! Boo! Boo!"

Examples of the other kind are the navy's pithy adjuration which booms across the football field, "Fight like hell!" the defensive war cry of New Haven, "Hold 'em, Yale!" and the refined iteration of Cambridge, "Hawvud! Haw-vud!" At the ringside this type of cheer is expressed in such forms as "Yow! Mandelbaum, give to him a smesh in the gezicht!" or "Knock his ear down, Patsy!" At the track in such forms as "Oh, Camembert! Come on, you oat-burning old cow. Hike, you aromatic goat!"

But at these occasions there is action to inspire enthusiasm. The contestants are in plain view. And, even so, the longest cheer that ever rolled up from a sport celebration would have been all through and on its way down the welkin at least 45 minutes before the excited party in Madison Square Garden had recomposed his quivering blubber, emitted his last expiring "Wow!" for William G. McAdoo and subsided into his chair.

For an hour and two minutes the McAdoo people went howling around the floor of the old garden, where so many variations of the raspberry cheer and the other kind have jiggled the steel girders since the day of John L. Sullivan. All because a man named Phelan had mentioned McAdoo's name. Mr. Phelan's face is covered with a peculiar sprout of bristles. It is impossible to state offhand whether these are intended to be a beard or whether Mr. Phelan has merely neglected to shave for a few days.

McAdoo wasn't even there. That is the strange thing about political cheerleaders. They can cheer a name. They can cheer a name as old as Andrew Jackson's. There is no telling what cheers they might raise for a name as old and as belligerent as Alexander the Great. It was a peculiar cheer, not angry, not particularly joyous, but loud enough for any purpose. An old Smith man said they where cheering for jobs as postmasters, as clerks of the federal court and steamboat inspectors, at from $10,000 a year down. In Al Smith's case they will be cheering for the drinks. But all political cheering seems to come under a new classification, different from the old familiar Bronx cheer and the other kind.

Some impetuous connoisseurs of cheers might decide off-hand that these political cheers which go on and on long after all the impulsive joy has been spent on the heated air of the arena are not strictly on the level. But let's be open-minded about it. Maybe, if you stood a chance of landing a $5,000 job, you'd be willing to cheer a few hours yourself.

ALMOST NO CHANGE IN LINEUP VISIBLE

of the delegates and to influence the emotions and opinions of the convention, the city and the country.

Superficially one would be tempted to say that this fight for control of the atmosphere goes against McAdoo. The implements for this sort of thing are mostly in the hands of the Smith forces; and yet the very bitterness of the efforts against McAdoo tend to create a sentiment in his favor.

By device after device the effort is made to undermine McAdoo; to show that he ought not to win; that he cannot win; and that, even if he should win the nomination he cannot be elected in the fall. Many of the delegates who are neutral and some of the leaders and observers who are neutral think the same thing. But the nature of the devices used to make an anti-McAdoo atmosphere may at any moment cause a reaction in his favor.

New York Against McAdoo.

That New York is out to beat McAdoo there can be no doubt. Also, there can be no doubt that some of the methods used fully justify the indignation of McAdo and his friends. They even offend those whose position demands that they try to know no friends in politics. The leading democratic paper, the New York World, is the most energetic agency in the anti-McAdoo campaign. The World is not only powerful as a paper. Some of its executives are powerful as individuals in democratic circles. It was the World and the managers of it that had most to do with bringing the convention to New York and with arranging the convention details.

One day this week the Evening World had an article designed to show that Governor Smith, of this state, would win. It included a column of states and delegates headed "pledged to Smith." Included in this column were the states of North Carolina with 15 delegates "pledged to Smith," and Washington, with 12 delegates out of its 14 "pledged to Smith." Also North Dakota, with six. Probably no ten New York readers in ten thousand could know the grotesqueness of those figures. Not even the delegates could know, for the delegates from one state do not know about the delegates from another.

While the absurdity of these figures and these allegations will not be recognized by New Yorkers, it may be worth while to print them here for the not unworthy purpose of providing a good laugh to Raleigh, N. C., to Fargo, S. D., and to Tacoma, Wash.

Says Daniels Supporting Smith.

Even more specific than this, the Evening World on Monday carried a two column headline reading, "Daniels to Join Smith," under which headline it was asserted that "Josephus Daniels, who has declared he is for McAdoo, will in all likelihood swing his vote to Smith."

Now, ordinarily, any person intimately familiar with politics would laugh at that assertion. Josephus Daniels' state, North Carolina, is among the dryest of communities and the most strongly anti-Tammany. Josephus himself is one of the most zealous dry advocates in the country. It was, and is, laughable to imagine a delegate from North Carolina as prominent as Daniels helping a wet and Tammany candidate.

But then, it occurred to some of us that Smith's campaign manager is Franklin Roosevelt and that Franklin Roosevelt was the assistant secretary of the navy when Daniels was secretary. That gave just enough verisimilitude to cause some to think there might be something in it, absurd though it was on first glance.

There was a certain amount of scurrying about and we found out, as we originally believed, that the story was absurd. But the ordinary reader of the Evening World could not know it was absurd and so there was another contribution to an atmosphere favorable to Smith and unfavorable to McAdoo.

Arouses Bitter Feeling.

The campaign of the World to defeat McAdoo did not excite so much feeling so long as it seemed to be directed at that purpose only. The campaign was pretty violent, but it was thought the World was speaking in the interest of the party as a whole. But when, Monday, the World came out not merely against McAdoo, but in favor of Smith, there was a good deal of feeling.

There is now some whispering that the World has yet another ultimate purpose, as yet undisclosed, and that the World, like some of Smith's own leaders, is merely putting forth Smith in order to defeat McAdoo and with the ultimate purpose of having a third candidate on whom both factions can more or less agree. Whether this whisper is true, the writer does not know.

The fight of McAdoo and anti-McAdoo is, with increasing definiteness, a fight of the south and west against the east and north; of the rural parts of the country against the big cities; of the drys against the wets; of the delegates who are selected by direct primaries against the delegates who are selected by machines. The line-up is much the same as in the old Bryan fight. It seems as if the trouble with the democratic party is that most of its conscience and all of its emotions are in the south and west, whereas most of the sources for campaign funds and most of the organized democratic votes are in the cities of the north and east. The conflict of interest between these two has been a handicap to the democrats for a generation.

Klan Talk Laughable.

The public is being made aware that all this talk about the Ku Klux Klan is more to be laughed about than to get excited about. By far the best humorous story about the convention so far printed—and there have been many good ones—was one in the Baltimore Sun for Tuesday morning, by Raymond S. Tompkins. He treated the klan situation in the way that is demanded by both truth and art. He called on the New York hotel men to "act and act quickly." He said that there are not more than one million reserve bed sheets in New York and that there is a plot afoot for the "Kloo Kloos" to steal them and organize "a monster torch-light procession down Fifth avenue, each with a bucket of hot tar in one hand and a bag of feathers in the other."

Then the author went on with a most laughter-provoking column about the bugaboo the klan seems to be, but, in reality, is not.

As regards the fight for the presidency, the situation does not change. All interest, of course, is focused on the contest between McAdoo and Smith. Until that comes to some kind of conclusion, there will be little else of interest. Of course, the friends of the various dark horses are busily perfecting plans to take advantage of the situation if and when it is shown that neither McAdoo nor Smith can win. But until the early balloting shall have thrown some light on this, there is little interest in the dark-horse situation.

CLEVELAND JURY, OUT 115 HOURS, GIVEN DISCHARGE

Mobile, Ala., June 25.—Thomas W. Cleveland, charged with the killing of Stephen Lossing, an aged resident of this county, tried four times and at each trial mistrials resulting filed a petition in the circuit court today asking that he be admitted to bail.

The petition sets out that Cleveland has been tried four times, and that on each of said trials the jury has failed to agree on a verdict and a mistrial entered; that the proof is not evident and the presumption is not great that the petitioner is guilty of murder in the first degree, or that the jury will probably sentence him to be hung and that for this reason he is entitled to bail.

The jury in the case was discharged today after being out 115 hours. One of the jurors became too ill to serve any longer in the case.

HOUSTON'S NAME TO BE PRESENTED AT CONVENTION

New York, June 25.—David F. Houston, of New York, and Missouri, former secretary of agriculture and of the treasury, will have his name presented as a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination at tomorrow's session of the national convention by Lewis G. Stevenson, son of the late Adlai E. Stevenson, vice president in the second Cleveland administration.

committee to agree on a league of nations plank.

Four—Descision of the resolutions sub-committee to lay the klan question before the full platform committee without recommendation.

Five—Increased activity by all dark horses.

Dove No Peace Omen.

The snow white dove which flew over the convention just after it assembled Wednesday proved to be anything but an omen of peace. For no sooner had Chairman Walsh finished his denunciation of the republican administration scandals than the convention, seizing its first opening, plunged into the klan demonstration.

So bitter was the personal feeling aroused that fights occurred in various parts in the hall. Two women held the standard of Missouri against an anti-klan delegate who tried to jerk it up and join the parade around the hall. Colorado's standard was broken in a similar fight.

Cato Sells, a Texas delegate, knocked down a Pennsylvania delegate who demanded that the Texans get up. Five of the Texas delegation weakened and stood up, much to the indignation of the remaining delegates.

Smith Workers Jubilant.

The spontaneous outburst was a surprise to all convention leaders. They had hoped to dodge the issue in the platform, but this does not seem possible now. It probably will provoke a fight on the convention floor.

Meanwhile Smith workers were jubilant, feeling that this display of hostility to the klan would react against the California candidate materially. Underwood workers were flirting aggressively with the Smith people, hoping to pool their strength and stop McAdoo and then, in event Smith cannot be nominated, to inherit his following.

Judge David Ladd Rockwell, McAdoo's manager, was undismayed by the anti-klan outburst.

"I expect to see Mr. McAdoo nominated Saturday," he said. "The delegates are in no temper for an indefinite deadlock. The whole atmosphere of the convention shows that the McAdoo lines are intact and that he has much reserve strength."

DISMUKE AND AID GO ON TRIAL TODAY

Overruling the defendants' demurrer, Judge Samuel H. Sibley, of the federal district court, Wednesday ordered the trial this morning of the case of C. D. Bridges against F. D. Dismuke, federal prohibition director, and J. W. Powell, federal prohibition agent.

The plaintiff seeks to recover the sum of $5,000, alleging that defendants maliciously caused a warrant to be issued by United States Commissioner W. C. Carter for the purpose of searching a store-house at 425 Grant street, where Bridges owned and conducted a mercantile business for sale of family groceries.

The petition sets forth that the warrant was secured on March 18, 1922, upon representation that whisky was stored and sold in violation of the national prohibition act at the petitioner's place of business. The petition alleges that the premises were unlawfully invaded and searched, the petitioner's credit and standing greatly injured, and his "feelings were cruelly wounded and mortified."

Defendants' demurrer, which Judge Sibley overruled, averred that this court is without jurisdiction of the cause of action and subject matter set out in the plaintiff's petition.

SAFETY COUNCIL URGES PASSAGE OF NEW MEASURE

The Atlanta Safety council Wednesday unanimously adopted a resolution endorsing a bill which will be introduced in the Georgia legislature, now in session, which would require every person driving a motor vehicle on a public highway, on approaching a railroad grade crossing to stop before crossing or attempting to cross and providing for warning signs and penalties for non-observance of the law.

The proposed bill contains the provision that any person or railroad company violating any provisions of the act shall be guilty of misdemeanor and punished by a fine not to exceed $10.

The Safety council's resolution unqualifiedly endorses the proposed measure and requests that the Georgia legislature enact a law containing the provisions embodied in the act.

CHAMBER BOOSTS STATE PORT PLAN AT MEETING HERE

Decision to investigate the economic facts concerning establishment of a state port featured the regular monthly directors' meeting Wednesday of the chamber of commerce. R. S. Barker, secretary of the chamber, will conduct the investigation and report his findings to a committee soon to be appointed, which will take action accordingly.

Action of the chamber came as a result of the impression made by the recent visit to Atlanta of a party of Savannah business men, who contended that a state port would help all business in Georgia, being of especially great assistance in marketing agricultural products, according to speakers.

Plans were approved for the organization by the chamber of a party of not less than 200 Atlanta business men to make a "get-acquainted" tour of the state this fall, visiting at least 25 cities on the way.

The following new members were elected: Atlantic Manufacturing company, Carter Bank Fixture company, Centrif-Air Machine company, W. J. Hammond; Henard Mayonnaise company, Insect Killer corporation, Louis B. Magid; Charles B. Merrill company, Shaughnessy Knitting company and Trivers Clothes Stores.

MADISON AGAIN HEADS LENDERS OF GEORGIA

A. B. Madison, manager of the Master Loan Service, Wednesday was re-elected chairman of the Georgia Industrial Lenders' association at its annual business meeting. His new term will be his fourth successive year as head of the state organization.

E. M. Steimle, manager of the Citizens Loan company, was re-elected secretary and treasurer. Henry Sharp was re-elected vice president. The following were chosen for the executive committee: Messrs. Madison, Steimle, Sharp, B. L. Lassiter and S. B. Snyder.

Chairman Madison and Mr. Steimle were the principal speakers, their talks dealing with activities of the organization during the past 12 months and the contemplated work for the next year.

Methods of extending the membership and other matters of vital importance to the lenders' association were discussed.

Chairman Madison and Mr. Steimle were elected delegates to the convention of the American Industrial Lenders' association in Baltimore next autumn.

BOARD OF EDUCATION ISSUE TO BE FORCED

Decision to force the fight on the issue of an independent board of education, with a substantially greater revenue than is provided at present, was reached Wednesday afternoon by the special charter revision committee of the board of education in executive session.

The line of attack to be adopted by the board was not decided, it was stated by D. M. Therrell, chairman of the committee, and another meeting is to be held today to prepare definite recommendations to be made to the board at a special meeting to be held probably on Saturday.

The board, according to Mr. Therrell, is aligned solidly against the W. B. Hartsfield charter amendment proposal to abolish the present board and create a new one elected by city council and with its expenditures subject to control of mayor and council.

The Hartsfield amendment is to be submitted to the people at a referendum election some time during the early fall. The board has not decided whether to demand that its plan be voted upon at the same time with the Hartsfield plan, or whether it shall arrange for a special election at which the board plan alone will be proposed for popular ratification.

The Hartsfield amendment provides for no change in the present tax rate and no compulsory increase in appropriation to schools.

The board plan provides for complete independence for the present board, a two-mill increase in city tax rate and apportionment of 32 per cent of the city's entire revenue to schools instead of 26 per cent as at present.

OFFICERS SEARCH FOR MURDER CLUE IN MIXON DEATH

While DeKalb county officials and members of the family clung to their theory of murder as returned in the verdict of a coroner's jury, Fulton county authorities probing the case Wednesday announced they were convinced that Oliver Mixon, bookkeeper for a local supply company, met death by suicide. Mixon's lifeless body, with the throat slashed from ear to ear, was found in a small stream in DeKalb county Sunday after a search for the missing man had been in progress several days.

According to Special Investigator Plennie Miner, attached to Solicitor General John A. Boykin's office, every indication points to suicide while in a frenzy, suffering from an obsession that parties were following him around for the purpose of doing him bodily harm.

"He never could furnish his friends or relatives any coherent account of why anyone should have any designs upon him or his life, nor could he intelligently furnish any clue as to the probable description of the persons he feared," Officer Miner stated.

Investigators developed that Mixon was unable to sleep for several nights before he mysteriously absented himself from the office of the company, on Milton avenue; that he would often go to the window of his room and peer out, saying "they are going to get me tonight."

He is said to have remarked to fellow employees in the office when he left to be seen no more alive by friends or relatives, that "they were after him and would get him." The next trace officers found of him was when a youth picking berries last Sunday came upon the body, with throat slashed from ear to ear, lying half submerged in shallow water in Little Nance creek, near Chamblee.

CHAPMAN CLEARED OF THEFT CHARGE IN FULTON COURT

A verdict of not guilty resulted in the trial Wednesday of Ernest Chapman, Atlanta policeman, on a charge of burglary made against him by his wife, who is under indictment for assault with intent to murder in the shooting of her husband.

Mrs. Chapman, following the shooting, made a case against Chapman, accusing him of stealing clothing and shoes from the store of Abe Fleshner, 154 Decatur street. The case was tried in Judge J. D. Humphries' division of superior court.

The trial of Mrs. Chapman has been indefinitely postponed.

Members of the association are asked to submit suggestions which might prove of value in choosing the winning member for 1924, to the committee of three named to make the award. LOCAL BILLS GET FAVORABLE REPORT OF COMMITTEE

At a brief meeting of the house committee on municipal government, held immediately after Wednesday's session of the house of representatives had adjourned, three local bills were read and ordered reported back to the house with the recommendation that they do pass.

The bills included house bill No. 600, introduced by the Bartow county delegation, to amend the act to authorize the city of Adairsville to issue bonds; house bill No. 605, introduced by the Chatham delegation, to amend the charter of the city of Savannah. This is a local "omnibus bill," and was favorably acted on with the exception of section 12, dealing with the issuance of bonds, which was held unconstitutional and stricken from the bill; and house bill No. 607, introduced by Atkinson and Eve, of Chatham, to provide for a commission manager form of government for the city of Savannah.

BURGLAR KILLED BY WHITE YOUTH

Caught in the act of burglarizing the garage of Dr. D. F. Smith, of 92 Park avenue, at 11 o'clock Wednesday night, an unidentified negro was shot by Dr. Smith's 19-year-old son Morris, and died a few minutes later, after staggering nearly a block to the residence of Mrs. W. S. Wright, of 274 South Boulevard. The negro fell in the driveway of the Wright home and was dead when young Smith reached him.

Smith surrendered to Detectives Moon and Jackson, and is charged with manslaughter. He was released on $1,000 bond pending the outcome of the investigation.

The shooting followed a desperate hand-to-hand struggle between Smith and the negro, following Smith's discovery of the negro and a confederate in the act of looting the Smith garage, located in the rear of the residence. The confederate fled following firing of the first shot and it is thought that he also was shot. Mortally wounded, the negro ran from the garage and, pursued by Smith, staggered down Boulevard to the Wright home, where he crumpled to the ground.

Garage Lighted.

Smith told police that he stepped into the kitchen to lock the rear door before retiring when he noticed a light in the garage and saw that the lock had been broken from the door. Arming himself with a revolver and flashlight, and without even waking other members of the household, he went to the garage to investigate.

As he jerked open the garage door a negro, evidently stationed behind the door as a lookout, struck at him, knocking the flashlight from his hands. The other negro then attacked him, throwing a heavy jack at him first, then wielding a monkey wrench, closing in.

Smith wrested the wrench from the man's hand and opened fire, three shots taking effect. The negro dashed into the street, with Smith in pursuit.

Saw Negro Fall.

Mrs. Wright, awakened by the shooting and sounds of the chase, ran to the window of her house in time to see the negro fall in the front yard. She notified police immediately. Other residents of the neighborhood told officers that they had seen a negro run down Boulevard and it is thought that it was the escaping confederate.

No papers or any marks of identification were found on the dead man's person, about $28 in cash and a gold watch, with no name, being the only contents of his pockets.

Coroner Paul Donehoo was notified and an inquest will be held today.

ALTERNATE PLANKS FOR KLAN, LEAGUE

draft upon which the contending elements could meet on the one big issue of the convention—whether the Ku Klux Klan is to be denounced by name.

As the committee began its deliberations, an anti-klan demonstration was in progress in the convention in Madison Square Garden, a block and half away. Despite this, a majority of the eleven platform builders are disposed now to report a plank for religious freedom without specifically naming the invisible empire.

Hopes to Avoid Fight.

Chairman Homer S. Cummings and other members still expressed hope that this issue could be settled in the platform committee without a fight on the convention floor, and they found some encouragement from the attitude of managers for several of the candidates and representatives of a number of Catholic and other organizations.

Some of the more determined opponents of the klan still were insistent, however, that the question would be taken to the convention unless the platform committee, which must pass upon the draft of its subcommittee of eleven, acceded to their wishes. E. H. Moore, of Ohio, and representatives of the Minnesota and Wisconsin delegations, which have submitted planks denouncing the klan by name, visited the committee room to make a final appeal to some of the members privately.

After the klan, the most troublesome proposition before the subcommittee is the plank dealing with the League of Nations. It was decided to take up the most controverted subjects first in an effort to dispose of them before the committeemen had become fatigued by their long hours and arduous labors.

League Question.

Under this arrangement, the league question came up first and after an hour and a half of discussion, a subcommittee of three was named to take several proposals which had been submitted and whip them into shape for consideration. Newton D. Baker, secretary of war under Woodrow Wilson, and a league advocate, headed the committee of three.

Tacit instructions to the subcommittee were to take the first paragraph of the plank submitted by former Supreme Court Justice John H. Clarke, as president of the League of Nations Non-Partisan association: add to that the whole league plank submitted at public sessions today by Owen D. Young, of New York, a member of the Dawes reparations commission; and then to write in suggested methods for American cooperation with other nations in preserving the peace of the world.

The first paragraph of the Clarke plank follows:

"It is of supreme importance to civilization and mankind that America be placed and kept on the right side of the greatest moral question of all time, and therefore the democratic party renews its declaration of confidence in the ideal of world peace and in the League of Nations and the world court of justice as together constituting the supreme effort of the statesmanship and religious conviction of our time to organize the world for peace."

The Young plank follows:

Text of Young's Plank.

"In fairness to ourselves and to the world, it is essential that the foreign policy of the United States be consistent and continuous, and that its decision be uninfluenced by partisan controversy on domestic issues. Next to aggressive unfairness, there is no greater promoter of misunderstanding or menace to peace than weakness, vacillation or cowardly reserve in dealing with other nations. The democratic party stands for a sound, firm and definite foreign policy, and the open, courageous and official execution of such a policy.

"The government of the United States for the last four years has had no foreign policy, and, consequently, it has delayed much the restoration of the political and economic agencies of the world. It has impaired our self-respect at home and injured our prestige abroad.

"It has curtailed our foreign markets and ruined our agricultural prices.

"The efforts of the administration to find a foreign policy through uninstructed, unofficial observers and experts is unworthy of a great nation and misleading as to our spirit and intent. Such advances as have been made toward a European settlement during the last four years have been accomplished in spite of rather than with the aid of the government of the United States.

Favors Fullest Cooperation.

"More specifically, the democratic party favors cooperation with or participation in such organizations, including the league of nations, as may be helpfully functioning in the social and economic rehabilitation of the world, on such terms as will, on the one hand, protect the sovereignty and independence of our government, and on the other, enable it to render its full service and receive its full benefit from the common and enlightened action of all the nations.

"The democratic party specifically and irrevocably pledges itself to take the initiative through every agency at its disposal or through the creation of new ones to outlaw war and to make peace the accepted policy of the nations. While we sympathize with the objects to be attained through a properly constituted world court, we are, nevertheless, unwilling to participate in the delusion that such a court, unsupported by other agencies, can, within several generations at least, have any appreciable influence on the major controversies between nations."

Strong Dry Plank.

Taking up prohibition next, the platform builders agreed tentatively on a strong law enforcement declaration without mentioning either the Eighteenth amendment or the enforcement act. This was in line with recommendations of most of the "dry" leaders.

A plank declaring for immediate independence of the Philippines under the provision of the Jones law also was agreed upon tentatively. It recites that the conditions to independence laid down in that law—the establishment and maintenance of a stable government—have been complied with.

While the committee was considering the prohibition or law enforcement plank, John T. Flood, of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, issued a statement declaring that John H. McCann, member of the platform committee for Pennsylvania, would make a fight before the entire committee for a declaration for modification of the Volstead act and that if he failed there, he would carry the fight to the convention.

"This convention must go on record and let the country know where it stands," Mr. Flood said.

Agriculture Plank Bothers.

Besides the klan and the league issues, another troublesome question is that of agriculture. Spokesmen for this industry have expressed varying views as to what they desire, but committeemen believed they could present a plank which would harmonize all except possibly the wishes of the extremists.

Only three party "wheel horses" are represented in the committee of eleven. They are William Jennings Bryan, of Florida; former Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, of Nebraska, and Homer S. Cummings. Associated with them are a number of the newer party leaders, including Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts; Representative Finis J. Garrett, of Tennessee, democratic leader in the house of representatives; Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada; Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma; former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker; W. H. O'Brien, of Indiana; William A. Ayres, of Kansas, and Joseph A. Kellogg, of New York.

Concluding their public hearings much later than had been anticipated, the committeemen decided to desert headquarters for a more secluded place and proceeded to a hotel several blocks further downtown. They gathered around a circular table late in the day and began their labors.

Coats were removed at the outset and the session was only a few minutes old before collars were shed, shirt sleeves rolled up and shirt bands turned in.

Make Hourly Reports.

Chairman Cummings made hourly reports to newspaper correspondents who crowded the corridors outside of the committee room. At the end of the first hour he announced a discussion of the league without decision, explaining that much of the time had been taken up with the presentation by former service men of a number of propositions relative to the care of the sick and compensation with reference to those who after receiving treatment had not been fully restored to health.

Some new planks with reference to waterway projects also were received. Mr. Cummings said they had special reference to the Mississippi and Colorado rivers, dealing both with flood control and the reclamation of arid areas.

Before the committee recessed for dinner the chairman announced that progress had been made and that about twelve subjects submitted at public hearings or privately had been rejected as too irrelevant to be included in the platform. He did not go into details.

All-Night Session Probable.

"I should suspect," Mr. Cummings added, "this committee will be in session the greater part of the night. I hope we will be able to go over the work of the subcommittee before morning. Then the subcommittee will draft in final form the matter which has been tentatively agreed upon and get it ready for submission to the full committee. Many things on which there has been no dispute have been passed over, but we will have to see that they are put in proper form. I do not see any possibility of any report to the full committee until tomorrow, well into the day.

"The proceedings are very amicable, although we have discussed various questions on which there have been differences of opinion."

There was general discussion without immediate decision over the advisability of a declaration for legislation under which amendments to the constitution would be passed upon in a referendum of the people and not by the state legislatures.

Drop Immigration Subject.

Decision was made not to reopen the immigration subject. Committeemen took the view that the measure recently passed by congress adequately took care of the subject.

Proposals to create a department of highways were rejected, but Senator King, of Utah, chairman of the subcommittee of three which is sorting the various proposals, and former Senator Hitchcock were directed to frame a plank expressing the belief of the democratic party that the waterways and highways should be improved and safeguarded for public use.

Discussion of the Philippine independence plank was lengthy. A proposal forst was put forward that Major General Leonard Wood, governor general of the islands, be assailed on the ground that his administration of Philippine affairs had been contrary to the spirit and letter of the Jones law. This was abandoned.

The first suggestion with regard to the Philippines was that independence be granted within ten years. After discussion, that was modified to four years, and after more talk the committee decided on a plank in favor of immediate independence.

Reassembling after dinner, the committee approved a plank by Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, which will declare for government control and regulation of the anthracite industry and other corporations or organizations controlling the necessities of life.

LEGISLATORS SHOW MID-SEASON FORM

to abolish capital punishment; to provide electrocution instead of hanging as the legal method of carrying out the death sentence; to provide that the legislature shall adjourn sine die after a 25-day session, and to create a joint committee of both houses to handle all tax reform proposals.

Senate Inactive.

The legislature convened exactly at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. There was an attendance of about two-thirds in the house and a rather higher proportion in the senate. The senate found itself in the unprecedented position of having no business before it as it began the second year of its term. All business was wound up at the conclusion of the 1923 session.

In the house, conditions were far different. Many matters come up as unfinished business. The result of this situation was that the senate adjourned at 10:35, after a 35-minute session, and the house remained in session for an hour and a half, adjourning at 11:30 o'clock. Both houses adjourned until 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

Among the most important bills before the house as unfinished business is the biennial sessions bill, providing that the legislature shall meet only every other year, instead of annually as at present. Comment among members of both houses indicated a strong possibility that this measure will pass this year. It will be a constitutional amendment to be submitted to the people for ratification at the polls next November. It passed the senate last summer and comes before the house as unfinished business.

New Money Measures.

Among other new bills introduced in the house was one to appropriate $13,000 to the Third District A. & M. college. Another would establish a new college of agriculture and mechanical arts as a branch of the University of Georgia, to be located at Tifton. Still another would designate a complete state civil service system and another provides for the analysis of all fertilizer by the state chemist.

Representative Milner, of Dodge county, introduced a bill to provide that in future state-wide presidential preference primaries shall be held on the same date as county primaries, and that the county executive committees of the party shall name the delegates to the national convention from among the friends and supporters of the successful candidate.

Other matters which came up on motions to reconsider adverse action at the last session included the forestry bill, to provide a forestry commission for the state, which was again defeated, and the bill to require all motor vehicles to come to a stop at all railroad crossings. The motion on this latter bill was withdrawn with notice that it would be brought up again on Friday.

Three New Members.

Three new members were sworn in to the lower house at the Wednesday session. They were Representative Thomas C. Bleckley, of Rabun county, succeeding his father, Representative J. E. Bleckley, deceased; Representative Joseph S. Burgin, of Marion county, succeeding Representative E. H. McMichael, deceased, and Representative J. D. Weaver, of Terrell county, succeeding Representative W. B. Parks, resigned.

Resolutions deploring the deaths of Representatives Bleckley and McMichael were adopted.

Preceding the roll-call in the house, Dr. B. R. Lacy, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, of Atlanta, opened the session with prayer. On the roll-call about two-thirds of the membership answered present, including both the women members, Mrs. Viola Ross Napier, of Bibb, and Miss Bessie Kempton, of Fulton.

FLORIDA SHERIFF SLAYS ENGLISHMAN

cording to the sheriff, Bowes rushed toward them flourishing an automatic pistol, taking refuge behind a tree and aiming carefully at Sheriff Lyle, who led the pursuers.

Sheriff Lyle said he fired at the man with a high-powered rifle, one of the bullets striking him in the head and killing him instantly. The next day he was identified as Bowes.

The Englishman was said to have left a considerable sum in Liberty bonds in his house and to have had money in the bank at Mayo. The authorities expressed the belief that he had become suddenly mentally deranged. His body was buried in the cemetery at Live Oak.

Mathis will recover, according to physicians.

BOWES HAS CRIME RECORD IN LONDON.

New York, June 25.—Albert George Bowes, on November 27, 1912, shot and seriously wounded Sir Edward Richard Henry, chief commissioner of the London metropolitan police. The commissioner was alighting from a motor car at his residence on his return from Scotland Yard. As the car stopped, Bowes ran from the opposite side of the street and fired at the commissioner three times with a revolver. One of the bullets entered the commissioner's left groin. The others missed their mark. Sir Edward's chauffeur grapple with the assailant and overpowered him.

Sir Edward recovered from his wound and in January, 1913, Bowes was tried, convicted and sentenced to fifteen years' penal servitude.

An investigation into the cause of the shooting of the commissioner revealed the fact that Bowes, a month prior to the attack, applied at Scotland Yard for a taxicab license, which was refused him. Subsequently he wrote to the commissioner pleading for a reconsideration, but without avail. For this reason, it was asserted, he nursed a grudge against the commissioner and lay in wait for him and shot him.

Since he was sentenced to prison in London for the shooting of the commissioner, the cables have brought no information concerning Bowes. How he escaped serving the term of imprisonment imposed upon him is not known here.

Traces of platinum have been discovered on an islet near Gothenburg, Sweden.

EX-SERVICE MEN ASK TWO PLANKS TO BE INSERTED

New York, June 25.—Former service men among delegates to the democratic national convention agreed to work for incorporation in the party platform of two planks. One would criticize the language used by President Coolidge in his bonus veto message, and the other would declare for adequate care of the disabled and reorganization of the veterans' bureau.

The meeting did not involve a discussion of individual candidates, although many of those present expressed a desire to see a former service man placed on the ticket.

ONE IS KILLED, MANY ARE HURT AS COPING FALLS

Chicago, June 25.—A woman, identified tonight as Miss Addie Striplin, daughter of Dr. John P. Striplin, of Roanoke, Ala., was killed and 15 other persons hurt, several so seriously that they may not live, when a 40-foot stone coping fell from a three-story building in the downtown district today. Miss Striplin's body will be sent to Roanoke.

MUSSOLINI IS GIVEN VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

Rome, June 25.—The entire majority of the chamber of deputies, about 300 in all, met in the Hall of the Consistory at the Palazzo Venesia, listened to a speech by Premier Mussolini and unanimously voted a resolution of confidence in the government.

The premier stated frankly that certain excesses of his followers made it absolutely necessary to enforce the finest discipline in order to carry out the program which the government majority has outlined.

The resolution of confidence stated that the government must remain an unshakable bulwark in the present political situation and that justice will follow its inevitable course in relation to the alleged kidnaping and murder of Socialist Deputy Matteotti.

Four men, newly arrested in Milan in connection with the murder of Deputy Matteotti, were brought to Rome today. They were Giuzppe Villa, Filepho Panzeri, Augusto Malaeria and Giuzppe Florida. They are all said to be intimate friends of Albino Volpi, already under arrest in connection with the crime.

Convention Sidelights

BY OTIS PEABODY SWIFT.

United News Headquarters, Waldorf Hotel, New York, June 25.—Packed thousands in Madison Square Garden simmered as in a Turkish bath. Gaudy flags, draperies and lanterns, lithograph-like under beams of circling flood lights, smote the eye. From the platform, above the tumult of thousands of whispered conversations, Fordney Johnston was placing Oscar Underwood in nomination.

His figure was electric with enthusiasm. Into the four microphones he roared the praises of his man. His voice rose to crescendo in the last crashing climax, left jab, right jab—Underwood!

Directly behind him sat—almost squatted—a hunched figure. It was Senator Walsh, of Montana. His gray head was heavy on his wilted collar. His eyes were far away. He munched a small brownish banana.

Underwood!—Pandemonium on the floor! Last bite of banana.

Thus kings are made.

Early in his speech Johnston had aroused hope with the announcement, "It is not necessary for me to eulogize my candidate." He then launched into 45 long minutes of sheerest eulogy.

James D. Phelan, frock coated and crammed with dignity, moved forward on the platform for the address in which he was about to nominate McAdoo. His chin was high and his jaw square. He poised himself to speak.

"Hey, senator, get closer to that chair!" shouted a newspaper photographer whose camera was all set. The dignified figure paused, looked startled, and obeyed.

As the speakers droned or thundered, one marveled at what all those people could be thinking about, out there. In the broiling galleries and at the far ends of the oval hall the faces merged into a black and white sea. Nearer at hand individual faces stood out, mild, bland, laughing, hot, hard, shrewd or mean faces. These people obviously were not listening to the speakers. What on earth were they thinking about, these men and women of Alaska, California, Porto Rico, the Canal zone, who had come here to make a president?

The cool white hospital room is just at that curve of the garden where the chariot race used to start in the old circus days. Dr. Glazier reports 10 heat prostration cases during the day, and one cut finger. Fat gentlemen with blanched faces rush in and swear their home town doctor says they can't live without stimulants. Dr. Glazier gives them each a glass of water.

McAdoo's men pulled a movie stunt. All the Californian's supporters were supplied with brilliant orange or blue silk bandanas, with "Bill McAdoo" embroidered on the edge. The bandanas were worn cowboy fashion, and the vivid splashes of color about the floor demonstrated McAdoo strength, and, in fact, exaggerated it through color illusion. It was clever.

The band was busy. It played "Sympathy" at the start. "Over There" for McAdoo, "Keep the Home Fires Burning" for Underwood, and "The Star Spangled Banner" when the delegations remained seated during the anti-klan demonstration.

In the middle of the McAdoo demonstration someone arrived at New Jersey's pew with an armful of banners boosting Governor Silzer's boom.

"Hide 'em—hide 'em," whispered the bystanders. The banners were tucked under a seat until the convention got through shouting for Mac.

Three cheers. One California delegate wore a red McAdoo bandana, a white palm beach suit and a blue convention ribbon.

A parade around the hall was in progress. The floor was going wild with excitement.

From high among the hot steel girders there fluttered a gray-white dove, dragged downward by the weight of a large pennant emblazoned "McAdoo."

Through the din, upon the joy-mad men below, the frightened dove came like a falling angel. It landed in the press box, panting, beady-eyed, terrified.

A newspaper man freed it from its burden, and the dove fluttered upward again, winging swift flight about the hall. Shrill cheers arose as the dove darted thrice about the yelling pit, seeking escape. Then someone in a gallery caught it, and the pretty bit of symbolism was ended.

Thus presidents are made.

TWO-THIRDS RULE VOTE UNANIMOUS

New York, June 25.—The democratic convention today voted to retain the two-thirds rule for nomination of candidates for president and vice president just as it was framed last night by the rules committee. Under the plan of procedure as adopted, a two-thirds vote means two-thirds of the ballots of delegates present and voting, and not a two-thirds vote of the number of accredited delegates.

The question of changing the unit rule, which governs the vote of many delegations, did not come up in the convention when the rules were adopted. There is a prospect, though, that the issue may be raised when balloting begins, as the minority members of some delegations want to bring the question to the floor in the hope that they may be freed from the unit rule as imposed by the majority members of their delegations.

Members of the convention, most of them hoping that the convention will not go as long as has been predicted, appeared to welcome today's plan of putting nominations ahead of consideration of the report of the platform committee. This will speed the machinery and will mean that delegates will get away at least one day, perhaps two days earlier than if the convention paused to await the platform now in process of framing by the platform committee.

The army has experienced difficulty in furnishing animals to the newly organized national guard units over the country.

G. O. P. Senators Take Precautions Against Raids

Rutland, Mass., June 25.—Twenty-one republican members of the Rhode Island state senate, declaring their intention to remain here if necessary until the present Rhode Island legislature goes out on January 1, 1925, took extraordinary precautions today against possible raids by political opponents.

Six stalwart members of the Massachusetts state patrol, as many plainclothes men from Providence and a detachment of plainclothes men from Massachusetts were in evidence tonight about the hotel where the senators took refuge last Sunday, a few days after bromine gas had been liberated in the senate chamber at Providence.

So strong are the precautions observed against kidnoping, which the senators profess to fear, and tonight one of the party asked permission of their leader here to go to a little village store, 50 feet from the hotel. He was permitted to go out with a guard.

In a statement tonight, Senator Sherman, president of the senate, declared a three-fold guarantee must be made by Governor William S. Flynn and Lieutenant Governor Felix Toupin.

"They must assure us of our personal safety," Mr. Sherman said. "They must promise to end the democratic filibuster in the senate. Thirdly, they must agree to permit the republican majority to go on with the regular calendar of business."

BRITISH EMPIRE CRISIS.

Tory newspapers in England are worried over the inter-empire situation. They fear that Premier Ramsay MacDonald with his rather short experience in the administration of the empire will not be equal to the tremendous problems that will come up for solution within a few months.

But most of all they are worried because MacDonald, at least in the days when he was a socialist agitator, made some rather plain statements on the very question of colonial exploitation and empire administration. In those days, how far off they seem now, Mr. MacDonald thought that the word colonies was just another way of saying injustice. He hoped for the day when India would shake off the yoke of Britain and assert her right to self-determination.

How far off do these days seem now. Responsibility of office and closer insight in the great destiny of the British empire have changed his attitude.

In the near future the status of the dominions must be reconsidered. They are no longer contented to remain dominions in the sense of glorified colonies. They want independence. Public sentiment in the dominions is not in favor of relinquishing the British connection, but there is a definite aim toward a greater measure of autonomy within the empire—a sort of miniature league of nations.

The greatest champion of this modern development of the empire idea is William Lyon MacKenzie King, grandson of the "rebel leader" in Canada who took up arms to battle the family compact and the British bureaucracy in the days of Canada's infancy.

The Canadian premier said that there was an ever-increasing necessity to review the dominion status, if Canada were not to drift in complete independence, loose from the empire and a mere adjunct of the United States.

In this contention he is upheld by his own party, the western and French-Canadian liberals with a sprinkling of nationalists. Even the conservative forces have admitted the necessity of a restatement of the status of their country, through their spokesman in parliament, Right Hon. Arthur Meighen.

This is one of the questions that Mr. Ramsay MacDonald must settle and must settle definitely. The other, no less far-reaching, involving the very existence of the British empire, is the recent development in the dominion of South Africa, where the Boers after 23 years of preparation have defeated the imperialist forces under General Jan Christian Smuts.

The Boers are out for an independent republic. They rely on Britain's subscription to the Versailles treaty and the league of nations covenant, which calls for self determination for small nations.

The aim of Mr. MacDonald will be to keep Canada and South Africa within the empire, probably by a new arrangement of greater autonomy, amounting to a closely binding economic compact.

But in the empire they will stay. Not as mere subsidiaries of England, but as independent members of a free alliance—potentially the greatest political force in the world—the British empire.

Running for office is mighty hot work just now, but what's the odds when they're afraid the office will sidestep 'em?

The song about "The Melon on the Vine" is a good one, as far as it goes, but the song of "The Melon on the Table" is the one that takes the big prize.

ATLANTA'S CLIMATE.

A well-known north Georgia lawyer who served in the legislature used to say that one of his chief reasons for seeking election was that attendance on the sessions gave him an opportunity to enjoy Atlanta's summer climate.

Coming, as he did, from one of the counties in the Cherokee section of the state these remarks brought a fusillade of ridicule from his colleagues, but after all the north Georgian was right.

Atlanta has its summer temperatures, to be sure. We have been having an ample supply recently, but a careful investigation of the weather bureau's reports will show that Atlanta has been faring well in comparison with many other cities of the country, some of which are located much farther north. The temperature may sometimes climb up about the nineties in the day, but there is always marked relief at night. So far we have had no prostrations or other serious results from the heat such as have been reported from other sections of the country. In fact it has long been a matter of comment that prostrations are much rarer here than in the large cities of the north.

Atlanta is especially fortunate in its topographical, as well as its geographical, location. Situated on a great ridge—an offshoot of the Piedmont escarpment—the slightest movement of atmospheric currents produces breezes which are felt here, and the breath of the Appalachian peaks comes down nightly to soothe one to sleep. In fact Atlanta and its immediate vicinity—where bed blankets are usually required throughout the warm season—can qualify as first-class summer resort territory.

The north Georgian who lived in a sheltered river valley and who came to Atlanta to cool off knew what he was doing.

SPIRIT OF COOPERATION.

There is a hopeful outlook in Europe right at this moment. In the first place the German chancellor and the people's parties, representing the industrialist and commercial classes, have been able to keep the extremists of both sides out of actual participation in the government; and in the second place there have come from the new French premier, Edouard Herriot, assurances of conciliation with the German democracy.

That was one of the most significant gestures since the armistice. For it will insure a mental disarmament of Germany, because it means the removal of the bayonet from the throat of the rich.

M. Herriot's next move, absolutely in harmony with the first act of his new policy, was to repatriate 7,000 German functionaries who had been exiled by the French from the Ruhr district.

Such a spirit of rapprochement, if mutually agreed upon, will mean the solution of the great reparation problems and will demonstrate that greater good can be achieved with reason and common sense than with all the violence and compulsion in the world.

Both Germany and France, that is the governments of these countries, favor the acceptance of the Dawes plan. When the execution of that plan is set into motion, a definite step toward peace will finally have been made.

Of course as time wears on there may arise the necessity of revising or changing certain provisions of the Dawes plan, but when the round-table conference method has once been adopted and France and German have got into the habit of talking things over without resorting to mobilization, such changes and suggestions from the interested parties will be minor matters.

Europe is getting into the right spirit—the spirit of cooperation.

There is just one way to escape the lure of the old fishing hole and that is to go.

Attention, everybody, hats off and mouths open! The Georgia watermelon has arrived!

In the republican campaign it may prove a case of too much elephant to carry.

Ad. of political carpenters: "New platforms made, and old ones patched up while you wait."

It's a safe bet that the late congress will do no special pointing "with pride."

The country has a pretty fat surplus, but we are not going to set our cap for any of it.

"Sometimes during the year people come to the Old Home paper for all kinds of dates and information, from the date of the birth of the baby, when the fire occurred or who stole their auto, and the like, and yesterday morning one of the clerks in one of the big stores came in to find out what his boss had advertised for a special sale commencing that morning—the customers had beat the boss on the job."

Chiropodists of State Urge Passage of Bill

Editor Constitution: A bill is now before the legislature to license podiatrists (commonly called chiropodists) and give the people of Georgia protection against imposters and people who call themselves foot specialists, who without sufficient knowledge through infection cause no small amount of trouble and sometimes jeopardize the life of their patients.

The average citizen thinks the chiropodist is licensed and holds a certificate of examination, which is not true at present. However, the bill passed the senate unanimously at the 1923 session, and if it meets with as much favor in the lower house this year it will become a law. Georgia passing such a law will make thirty states and the District of Columbia with full protection regarding the practice of this profession.

GEORGIA ASS'N OF CHIROPODISTS,
G. T. Dowling, Secretary.

Cotton Seed Oil Protected by Tariff

Editor Constitution: In your issue of June 22 there appeared a statement referring to the present tariff law, in which it was stated that the "tariff on peanuts is the only schedule that benefits the farmer in this section."

Without in any manner commenting on the merits or demerits of the present tariff law as a whole, I do feel that it is my duty as director of the state bureau of markets, and as chairman of the committee on defense of the vegetable oil schedules, to call attention to the inaccuracy of the statement that peanuts is the only schedule that benefits the farmer in this section.

Cotton seed oil is protected under the present tariff law, and for months the gigantic trusts who buy our cotton seed oil have been bringing every influence to bear to get a reduction in the duty on vegetable oil, so that they can bring in Chinese vegetable oil produced with 10 cents a day labor, and with this oriental oil break down the price of our cotton seed oil. The price of our cotton seed is governed completely by the price of vegetable oil, and already the past season the price of cotton seed was materially reduced on account of the attack on vegetable oil which was pending. Should the duty on vegetable oil be lowered, it would cause a drastic reduction in the price of cotton seed, thereby causing a loss of millions of dollars annually to cotton farmers.

My official position charges me with the duty of doing all in my power to get the best price possible for our farm products, and for this reason I was asked to accept the chairmanship of a committee to defend the present schedules on vegetable oil. As such, I have been contesting every inch of the ground, and shall continue to do so. Regarding the duty on peanuts, which have become so important in the agricultural life of Georgia, I will only say that should our present duty on peanuts be taken away, the industry in Georgia would be killed in one stroke, as we cannot compete with the Chinese grower of peanuts.

I am not entering into a tariff discussion, but merely making this statement to correct an inaccuracy, and in order that the facts relating to a grave agricultural problem may be known, ask that you publish this statement.

L. B. JACKSON,
Director State Bureau of Markets.

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. M'INTYRE

New York, June 25.—Vincent Astor's mansion on Fifth avenue is being torn down and a de luxe apartment building is to occupy the site. This means the passing of that upper stretch of the avenue known as "Millionaire's Row."

The "Row" has become too expensive for even millionaires. The ground covered by mansions of New York society is appraised so high by the city that taxes make the cost of living in one family houses too extravagant.

Scores of society people have, during the past two years, gone from private avenue homes to nearby apartments. Sutton Square—the new Pomander Walk—has a brilliant group of social leaders. It is over amid the squalor of the East River. Blackwell's prison is at the doorsteps.

On either side of the Astor home are such well known names as Hamilton Fish, William Guggenheim, Frederick Lewisohn, Elbert H. Gary, Thomas Ryan and Harry Payne Whitney. They too are shortly to move, so the rumor goes.

For years there has been an air of aristocracy along the row that fairly cracked. During the most of the year the homes are boarded up and the only ripple of life has been where the caretakers live in the basements.

But when the opera season is on the "Row" takes on its aura of wealth. Wigged butlers in knickerbockers unlatch the grilled doors. When a resident of the "Row" entertains there are cannopied tunnels leading to the limousines to keep off the vulgar gaze.

At eight in the morning the young ladies in dashing riding habits walk to the park to mount chargers for a gallop along the bridle path. Ten time at 5 brings out the men in high top hats and swakling coats.

The other morning I sat up until nearly dawn in my aparament talking to William S. Hart, the screen player. Our mutual love for animals drew us together. Dogs and horses are an abiding passion with Hart. Most of us think of Hart spending his early days as a two gun rider of the purple sage. At 21 he was a Broadway actor appearing in Shakespeariah and other heavy roles. He once played in Macbeth with Modjeska. Hart was particularly distraught. He was late to keep a theater engagement with some friends and on his way to the theater saw a lost dog on the street. He could not forgive himself for not attempting to restore the animal to its master. Hart loves chaps and the blue flannel shirt but he is also at home in correct dinner clothes which he wears with the grace of a Beau Brummel. He wants to leave the screen some day so he can devote his time to horses and dogs on his western ranch.

There is an effort among New York dramatic critics politely to sneer at vaudeville. Yet the most satisfying shows of the past season were elaborated vaudeville sketches and 80 per cent of the individual hits were among players recruited from the two-a-day. The pretentious bunk of the drama is lacking in vaudeville. It gains in popularity daily and the tone of it grows richer more quickly than that of the drama.

Speaking of vaudeville there is a small time vaudeville agent who I think has the most unusual name in town. It is Uptown Block.

And some of the greatest gag lines in vaudeville are written by a fellow who for years has been tortured by chronic headaches—the backfire of a South American fever. He is only free from pain for short intervals but during that time he fashions lines that in vaudeville parlance "rocks 'em in their seats."

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

White Lady Haunts Kaiser.

Kaiser Wilhelm in his stately castle at Doorn is said to be worried and disturbed. Word has reached him from Berlin that the White Lady, dreadful specter of the old palace at Potsdam and harbinger of disaster for the house of Hohenzollern, has been noticed wandering about in the deserted hallways and vestibules. The White Lady wore black gloves. That means, according to the traditional superstition, that a male member of the former royal and imperial family is about to die. Being the oldest member, the kaiser naturally feels that all things point in his direction. The story of the White Lady and her dreadful apparitions is hundreds of years old. Frederick I saw her on the night before his death and historians will have it that many others of the kaiser's ancestors glimpsed her spectral robes flitting through the corridors of the old palace. In reality she is said to be a friend of the Hohenzollerns and would never allow an enemy to enter the palace. When Napoleon heard of this on his conquering march to Berlin he purposely slept in the palace. What happened in the night is not known, but historians tell us that the emperor was pale in the morning and told his suite that he would never again set foot in the haunted house. It's strange, however, that Wilhelm should worry about it. Belief in ghosts and spooks is really not becoming in a Nietschean superman.

Bull Fights Superior, Says French President.

Monsieur Gaston Doumergue, first Protestant president of France, hails from the same section as the first Protestant king in France. Like Henri of Navarre, M. Doumergue comes from the Midi. It's the land of romance and chivalry, Numa de Roumestan, Tartarin, inimitable story tellers, exaggerators, the Three Musqueteers and a type of feminine beauty—that of Bearn and Bordeaux—said to eclipse all other five types of beauty in France. After coming to the Elysee, M. Doumergue was asked by the reporters what his favorite sport was. He told them bull fights. It is commonly thought that this princely pastime belongs solely to Spain and Mexico. But there are still some old Roman arenas in the south of France where the populace gathers after mass on Sunday to see an old-fashioned bull fight. M. Doumergue in commenting on his favorite sport said that no other show is quite its equal from any viewpoint. Dumas would have been delighted with that answer.

"In Due Course Of Time."

The government of Egypt has asked the British to settle the status of the Soudan. In other words the Egyptians would like to see the English leave that territory and annex it to their own kingdom. London tells the Egyptians that they will withdraw their troops "in due course of time." That will not be so very soon. England will always keep armed forces within striking distance of the Suez canal, the main road to her vast colonial empire in India. On the one side will be her troops in the Soudan and in Aden and on the other side is Palestine, where England has a protectorate under the league of nations and where the nucleus of a strong pro-British nation is being formed in the hodgepodge of Arab, Syrian, Assyrian and Turk intrigue, inter tribal jealousy and clashing racial interests.

When They Meet Again.

Maxim Litvinoff, who came to strengthen the red commission that is seeking the establishment of a trade agreement in London, has returned to Moscow. His special object was to arrange a loan with British bankers on behalf of the soviet government. In that object he has failed. In the first place Litvinoff was not able to promise the bankers that the government of Russia would more effectively carry out its guarantees for private undertakings in the vast Muscovite domain. And another thing that made the British bankers pull a wry face at Litvinoff's proffered friendship for the British empire was the speech made by Leon Trotsky while Litvinoff was in London. Trotsky declared that the red army, having overcome all internal enemies, would be thrown to support the proletariat of any country where the revolution demanded such intervention. By the same speech he sent word to the nationalists of India that some day the red army would come to deliver them from the "hated imperial yoke of hypocritical England." That, mind you, while Litvinoff was trying to arrange a loan. There will be some nice communist reunions when Litvinoff gets back home.

A Queen Indeed And Figureheads.

Mary Pickford and her husband are running around in Europe calling on kings and queens and presidents. The royal personages receive them gracefully enough. William Shakespeare would have fared a great deal worse had he started to "do" the courts. But then kings have changed since his day. Alfonso of Spain will go to any length to bolster up the waning prestige of his crown. Recently he revived an ancient custom of washing the feet of twelve of the poorest inhabitants of Madrid and afterwards waiting on table with his queen while the twelve were gorging themselves. That an American should be so anxious to meet the majesties of Europe, who are nothing more than figureheads in our day, would be a matter of contempt for those rugged intrepid adventurers who crossed the seas and set their faces toward a new world, where they would be free from the dictates and wiles, the quarrels and bigotry of royal masters. To them a matter of contempt, to us a mystery.

Lost Gospels Again.

"Lost gospel found in Kremlin vaults," so reads a press dispatch. It probably belonged to the collection of Ivan the Terrible, who had an army of workmen build him a subterranean library and later had the men murdered so that no one knew of its location. If there is actually discovered an unknown version of the life and message of Jesus Christ, it is a matter of great import. But that gospel was never really lost. It was merely too carefully laid away and lost from sight. The real and irretrievable lost gospels are the narratives and accounts of the life of the Founder of Christianity, which were "burned with fire and utterly destroyed" by the fathers of the church who made up the council of Nicea in 325. From the 200 gospels submitted, four were selected and 196 destroyed.

Plans for this revival were in charge of Dr. Benjamin O. Holtzendorf, first department superintendent and former president of the Atlanta Epworth League union. Services were conducted by Rev. Marvin Williams, pastor of Wesley Memorial church, and music was under direction of A. C. Boatman.

COLLEGE MEN PACK GEORGIA PEACH CROP

Fort Valley, Ga., June 25.—(Special.)—A college man's knowledge of the intricacies and problems of calculus or his knowledge of Latin and Greek may not aid him in packing peaches, but many college boys who are here engaged in the art of boxing the famous Georgia fruit are making good packers.

Fort Valley every year enjoys a brief visit from the literati during the peach season and this year is no exception. The boys have really "laid aside the fiddle and the bow" and are showing they can use their hands as well as their heads.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

RICE POWDER AND ORRIS ROOT CORYZA.

The practice of cropping the hair of women is holding its popularity, at least with the abnormally susceptible class—susceptible to suggestion. The barbers and hair dressers are maintaining a very effective propaganda of suggestion. They manage to make young women of flabby personality think "everybody's doing it," and under this impression the luckless ones rush in and sacrifice their hair, in many cases to repent at leisure. It isn't just the first cropping that inspires the barbers and hair dressers. No, no, Nora, there are regular, bi-weekly trimming, neck shaves, heat waves and dear knows what all to follow forever and ever—dear enough for the fattest purse. If any girl who reads this still has her hair on, I want to warn her against listening to the song of the sloth—the argument that cropping the hair saves one so much time and trouble dressing it. After the hair has been chopped off once, the young woman's troubles have just begun. Women who have rashly succumbed to this insistent suggestion of the barbers and hair-dressers complain that it takes about twice the time and pains to keep the bobbed hair looking like anything but the devil. The first cropping is like the first bottle of "cough cure," it sort of creates a demand for another.

The use of orris root powder for shampooing the hair is an old custom. It absorbs considerable oil and is therefore particularly effective when the scalp or hair is too oily. Women with cropped hair resort to this dry shampoo rather because it makes the hair more fluffy for a while, and in certain cases the use of orris root shampoo is responsible for a kind of non-seasonal "hay fever," a hyperesthetic rhinitis, or more properly anaphylactic coryza. Women subject to such a condition should know orris root powder is a possible cause.

The use of rice powder as a cosmetic is very common. Sometimes women who use rice powder on the face develop a chronic inflammation of the edges and lining of the eyelids, from the irritation produced by the minute grains of the powder in the eyes. When this occurs the only relief is obtained by giving up the use of rice powder, and by irrigating the lining of the eyelids with large amounts of normal salt solution to wash out the embedded rice grains. But besides this mechanical irritation by the rice starch granules, rice powder sometimes causes the same type of anaphylactic coryza that orris root does.

In orris root coryza or rice powder coryza the skin test with minute quantities of the substance shows whether the inidvidual is sensitized, as in skin tests for various pollens in hay fever and for various proteins in asthma.

Other substances which have been found responsible for anaphylactic coryza in certain cases are goose feather dust, chicken feather dust, horse dander, cat dander, and according to Dr. Hal M. Davison, of Atlanta, who has studied the question thoroughly, even house dust. These are more familiar as the causes of asthma. I mention the house dust with reluctance. Let us hope this won't discourage light or medium housekeeping.

BACKS MEANS' STORY ABOUT MR. UNDERWOOD

New York, June 25.—Testimony of the statement of Gaston B. Means that a man named W. T. Underwood had charge with the late Jess Smith of a nation-wide liquor investigation ordered by the late President Harding was given by Pierce Miller, a Washington newspaperman, in federal court today at the trial of Means and Elmer W. Jarnecke, on charges of violating the prohibition law.

Miller testified that he was introduced to a "Mr. Underwood" by Means in Palm Beach, Fla., last February, and that he also had seen Underwood in Washington. He also testified he had seen a letter written to Smith by President Harding commissioning Smith and Means to make a nation-wide liquor investigation.

Miss Watson, who was 69 years old, was born on a farm near Atlanta. She moved to Atlanta when a small girl and had resided in this city practically all her life. She was prominent in church work and had been an active member of the Second Baptist church for the past 50 years.

She is survived by one brother, William A. Watson.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later by H. M. Patterson & Son.

DESCRIBES VACCINE FOR TUBERCULOSIS

Paris, June 25.—Before a distinguished audience, including Professor Pierre Roux and Mme. Cure, Professor Albert Calmette last night described to the academy of medicine the results of his 20 years' work in the discovery on an anti-tuberculosis vaccine. The vaccine, known as "bog," is preventive, and only effective when applied to humans perfectly free from tubercular infection; consequently it must be administered to young children before the disease has developed. It can be administered through the mouth.

Dr. Calmette said that 247 nursing babies, chosen from those living in surroundings conducive to tuberculosis had been vaccinated 18 months ago and that none had yet developed the disease. He pointed out that years must pass before it could be affirmed that the disease was conquered.

What is the origin of the custom of conveying a kiss by a cross?

The story is that there was once a young man in the days of knighthood and chivalry and glittering deeds, named Sir Ronald du Bois, who was sent on a dangerous mission and was taken prisoner. He had left at home a fair and beautiful sweetheart, and it was his desire to send her some message. A bribed messenger promised to take some symbol to her but refused to bear a written message for fear he would be taken prisoner and the letter found. The knight therefore sent her a metal button from his coat on which he had scratched four letters at the four points of an X. The letters were k, i, s, s. Since this famous message, other lovers have used the X to stand for kisses, but omit the letters at each point. However the romantic story has never been forgotten.

Who was Toussaint L'Ouverture?

Francois Deominique Toussaint, called L'Ouverture, was a Haitian soldier and statesman born in 1734 and died in 1803. He was a full-blooded negro, his father and mother being African slaves. In 1793, the commissioners of the French convention proclaimed the freedom of the blacks of the island of Haiti. At this time invasions by the British took place. The blacks were rallied, organized and led to victory by Toussaint, who was recognized by them as general-issimo of their forces in the island, and who expelled the British in 1798.

Is there only one kind of Meteorite?

Several varieties of meterites are known: (a) metallic nickelferous iron: (b) a spongy mass of iron containing ollvenites and other minerals in its vesicles (olivenite is a brittle, adamantine, variously colored, but commonly green, subtransparent hydrous copper arsenate); (c) stony mass without particles of iron.

What is shellac?

Shellac is obtained from seed lac, which in turn is obtained from stick lac. The latter is resinous matter formed by the action of an insect on the twigs of trees indigenous to India and near-by places. This product is also the source of lac dye, which was formerly much used. Shellac comes on the market as orange shellac or as bleached shellac, the latter being made by bleaching the orange shellac with such agents as chloride of lime. The chief adulterant of shellac is rosin.

What nation first used iron?

Either the ancient Assyrians or Egptians. The earliest pieces of iron now known came from Egypt, but it is probable that the Assyrians were the first to use the metal freely in the manufacture of tools, weapons, and ornaments.

How are pineapples cultivated?

Pineapples rarely produce seed; they are propagated commercially by setting out the crown at the top of the fruit, slips from the base of the fruit, suckers from near the base of the stalk, and rattoons from the roots. Suckers are most commonly planted, since these usually produce a crop of fruit in from 14 to 18 months. Crowns or slips require a year to come into bearing. The plants are set in rows about 3 feet apart and 18 to 36 inches in distance in the row. Once established, pineapple plantation will endure 8 to 10 years without resetting, suckers replacing the old plants; little cultivation other than the scuffle hoe is required.

GOMPERS LEAVES BED TO ADDRESS PLATFORM BODY

New York, June 25.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, left a sick bed today to present labor's cause to the platform committee of the democratic national convention.

His face drawn and pale, he was assisted to and from the committee room by other officials of the federation. He was attended by a trained nurse and made frequent use of smelling salts during the 20 minutes he was in the committee room.

Despite the apparent effort it cost him, Mr. Gompers twice addressed the committee, pleading for justice for the workers and inveighing particularly against the use of the injunction by the courts in industrial disputes.

Charles F. Evans, southern secretary, states that the registration for the convention is unusually heavy. Prominent speakers have been obtained and educational features arranged.

PHILLIPS' LAWYER ASKS ACQUITTAL

Washington, June 25.—Attorney Charles A. Douglas, representing John L. Phillips, of Georgia, who with five others is charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States in the sale of surplus lumber from army cantonments, urged before Justice Bailey today that a variance fatal to the case of the prosecution exists between the allegations of the indictment and the proof offered by the government. The lawyer contended that the court must sustain his motion to instruct the jury to acquit Phillips.

The indictment, he pointed out, charges one joint conspiracy among the six men on trial and others whose cases have been severed while the proof, if it shows anything, discloses two separate conspiracies, one of which was further divided into several sub-conspiracies.

Mr. Douglas asserted there was no fraud in the procuring of the contract to Phillips and Stephens from the government that it was entered into in good faith and that the government had failed to show any fraud in its inception.

Attorney Wade H. Ellis supplemented the argument of Mr. Douglas on behalf of Phillips and was followed by Judge Samuel J. Konefick, of Buffalo, N. Y., counsel for Frank T. Sullivan, another of the defendants.

COOLIDGE, DAWES REAL OBJECTIVE, GOV. SILZER WARNS

New York, June 25.—Delegates to the democratic national convention were reminded by Governor Silzer, of New Jersey, in a formal statement issued this afternoon, that the real objective of the convention was "Coolidge and Dawes."

"The danger that I see in the early stages of the convention is that minor matters may be so over-emphasized as to temporarily obscure the real purpose of the gathering," said the New Jersey governor, himself a candidate for the presidential nomination. "That purpose, after all, is to beat Coolidge and Dawes. And the convention should not permit any sidetracking of that purpose.'

WALSH ARRAIGNS G. O. P. AS GRAFTER

Senator Walsh said, "that the American people are indifferent to the corrupting influence of corruption in office, high or low. But we shall see. They are on trial.

Sees Peril in G. O. P. Victory.

"If notwithstanding what has transpired the party now in power in the nation is continued in control by the choice of the people of the United States, apparent or real, what judgment must be passed upon them by the world?

"They enjoy the distinction of having erected and maintained a government whose officers are as free from suspicion of venality as those of any nation on earth, and they will not, I venture to predict, forfeit it."

Charging spokesmen of the republican party with attempts at palliation of the offenses of the "unfaithful public servants," Senator Walsh declared that it is "this tolerance of turpitude in public office that the real peril to free government lies rather than in its casual occurence."

President Shields Them.

"The president of the United States himself," he continued, "has not hesitated to endeavor to shield the delinquents from the public odium to which their derelictions have subjected them by joining in the hue and cry against the investigations that have been conducted under the authority of the senate and against that body for authorizing them. His message on the subject had for its plain purpose the suppression of an inquiry into the official conduct of a member of his cabinet."

Senator Walsh said President Coolidge had historic warrant for his attitude, recalling that when the British house of commons sought to investigate the Duke of Buckingham, Charles would not permit it.

"Charles lost his head," the senator added, "and Calvin Coolidge may profit politically by his example."

Calls G. O. P. Impotent.

Declaring the republican party to be impotent in the face of "an impending national calamity," Senator Walsh said that because of antagonisms within its ranks it had ceased to be an organization through which the business of the country can be carried on.

"It has no remedy, it offers no relief from the paralysis that afflicts agriculture, threatening every form of industry, the chairman said. "Moreover, it finds itself plagued with representatives in both houses of congress holding views so radically antagonistic to those of the dominant faction in the party as to preclude the possibility of uniting on any program of legislation."

"Effort of the dominant faction to shake off the insurgent members is as ludicrous as it will prove futile, the speaker, continued, adding that they could not be shaken off because they have the indorsement of their people.

Eager to Hide Issues.

Senator Walsh said he knows how eager the managers of the campaign for the reelection of President Coolidge were "to switch the issues from honest government, the repeal of the new tariff abomination, relief for agriculture and related reforms to the league of nations." He added that it was not so necessary that America immediately join the league as that it abandon foolish antagonism to any world movement, merely because it was in some way associated with the league.

"The honor of our country," he declared, "the prosperity of our people, demand that we return to the ideals of Woodrow Wilson, that we resume the place he won for us—the moral leadership of the world."

The text of Senator Walsh's address follows:

Text of Address.

"Judge not of my attitude nor of the depth of my appreciation of the honor you do me by the brevity of my acknowledgment, if I say simply, 'I thank you.' Both are profound.

"I am your servant, called to aid you in the discharge of the grave tasks with which you have been entrusted to expedite the business you have in hand, to see that it proceeds in such orderly fashion as is essential to due deliberation and a fair hearing for every cause. I am powerless without your cooperation to these ends. That it will be given in unstinted measure I entertain no doubt. The momentous character of this occasion is universally recognized. The eyes of the world are upon us. We are assembled in this great metropolis of our country, as the representatives of one of its historic political parties to select the next president of the United States. True, our choice must be ratified in due form, but guided in our deliberations by the spirit of wisdom invoked in prayer the event is not uncertain.

Opportunity Knocks.

"The opportunity is before us. The duty, the responsibility is ours. The nation expects, yea demands, of us, a leader who exemplifies the principles of government associated with the name of Thomas Jefferson, a leader whose heart is attuned to the pulsations of those who labor on the farm and in the mines, at the desk and in the household, who heeds the cry of all the people for a larger life, rather than the plea of the few, the favorites of fortune, who are eager to exploit their fellows, a leader who has the vision to divine and the courage to pursue the paths to which national honor points and that lead to national, as distinguished from exceptional, prosperity. Such a leader our party lately gave to the nation to guide its course and direct its energies in the greatest crisis that ever rocked the globe. By sheer force of his intellectual supremacy among the statesmen of the world, he assumed, by common consent, the primacy and, holding it, gave to the country, in whose name he spoke, a place in the family of nations never before attained. He challenged attention to the lofty ideals of America in manner never equalled and met with a response so generous as that for all time her sons will be thrilled at the story of his exposition of them.

"Insofar as he failed to secure their acceptance as the ruling president in international relations, his countrymen who derided his efforts and undermined his influence must bear the blame. Note the bitter fruits of their triumph.

G. O. P. Back to Bosses.

"Proclaiming that selfishness is the only constant or controlling factor in intercourse between governments and duplicity ever to be apprehended, the view found ready acceptance that ideals in any government affairs are only the vain hope of the visionary. 'Back to normalcy' meant back to the methods and practices of a day that was dead. Of a generation ago, when Hanna ruled and Aldrich legislated, when the senate was a millionaire's club, doing the bidding of the 'invisible government.' In an atmosphere tainted with such mischievous views, Newberry readily aspired to a seat in the upper house of congress, to be achieved by the lavish and corrupt expenditure of his great wealth, and in the general letdown in the moral tone met with a temporary success.

"Every predatory interest foregathered to restore to power the protagonists of venal and discarded theory of government, and having accomplished that end, they or their representatives swarmed about the president-elect and the purlieus of the captiol, each seeking to promote his own individual selfish project or purpose. It was easy to pass from the idea expressed in 'every nation for itself' to the related thought in 'every man for himself.' This recession to a lower moral standard was not a phenomen without a historic parallel.

Recurrence of Graft.

"A little less than a generation ago a president of the United States repeatedly declared, in what was by some regarded as intemperate language, against the sordid and corrupt influences that had become manifest in our national life. He did more. He invoked the penalties of the law against malefactors, high and low, and if it be true, as charged, that he occasionally looked leniently on the offenses of his friends, it is equally true that his acts as well as his words contributed materially to a restored respect for the Mosaic command, 'Thou shalt not steal,' as applicable no less to the affairs of government than to those of private life. There followed a period when a complaisant president tolerated the return of the spirit partially exercised by his predecessor, giving rise to the Ballinger scandal, a symptom of the resurgence of the element in his party that had used, and were determined to use, the agencies of the government within, and wherever safe, without the law, for private gain

"The catastrophe was overlooked by the republican party. In consequence of revolt of its own ranks against the sinister influences which dominated it need not be recounted, but it is significant of the character of their protest that that organization was denounced by one-half of its former adherents as essentially and irretrievably corrupt, and that they signalized their severance from it by singing 'Onward, Christian Soldiers.'

War Record Clean of Graft.

"I say nothing of the period of democratic ascendancy which followed, further than that after public moneys, in sums the magnitude of which the ordinary mind has and can have no adequate conception except by comparison, had been authorized and spent in the prosecution of the greatest war of all time, by those who, during that season of storm, represented us officially and investigation after investigation, undertaken by their political opponents, had revealed nothing culpable, the inquiry collapsed under the screen of the gentleman who, two weeks ago, was accorded by the republicans the second honor in its gift.

"When it is remembered that it was the same elements within it that controlled and wrecked that party in 1912, which retained the supremacy in 1920 over a more or less reunited organization, contemptuous of all aspirations having a spiritual basis, either in national or international controversies, to supplant the league of nations with which the name of the greatest American president, save only Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln, is so intimately associated, should be speedily consigned to oblivion.

Names Galaxy of Mercenaries.

"Those things considered, it will not appear so strange either that the new president was speedily surrounded by a group of mercenaries, whose sinister purpose he was, from his kindly nature, loathe to suspect and, for one reason or another, unable to discern. What a galaxy. Forbes, Fall, Doughterty, Jess Smith Mannington, Felder, Darden, Kramer, with Roxie Stinson and Gaston B. Means in the background.

"Was the appearance of these worthies purely accidental, sporadic in character? If it was not to be apprehended on account of conditions so bitterly denounced by the revolting republicans in 1922, consider how the leaders of the party to which they belonged have treated them in their delinquencies and villanies. What clarion voice has been raised from any high official quarter against Forbes, the desperter of the disabled veterans, or Fall, who bartered away an all-important element of the national defense under circumstances he dare not tell lest he confess criminality?

G. O. P. Virility Gone.

"In its virile youth the men whose names blazon the pages of the history of the republican party did not hesitate to declaim against the corruption that was sapping its vitality. The venality that stained the administration of General Grant, though it left him untouched, was denounced by none more roundly or with greater effect than William Cullen Bryant, William E. Curtis, Carl Schurz, Lyman Trumbull, Joseph Medill, Charles Francis Adams and John Bigelow, political associates of Abraham Lincoln. They found no extenuation of the crimes that in their day polluted the record of the party they had helped to set on foot, in a supposed after-the-war psychology.

"Instead of excoriating the unfaithful public servants of whose misdeeds the uttermost parts of the earth are not uninformed, to the disgrace of the nation as well as of themselves, palliation is attempted in the absurd observations emanating from the white house that 'men are involved who belong to both political parties,' a charge characterized by one of the few leading republican papers that have declined to condone the offenses revealed, as a 'paltry bit of political misrepresentation.'

Scores Prove Obstructors.

"Commenting further on the disclosures touching the leases of the naval oil reserves, the same journal remarks pertinently the "matter of real concern is the corrupt procedure of a member of the cabinet and the connivance of two of his colleagues," and that 'it is incontestable that responsibility for the scandal rests squarely upon the republican party.'

"It is in this easy tolerance of turpitude in public office that the real peril of free government lies rather than in its casual occurrence.

"Touching the abuse heaped upon those through whose efforts the investigations were made effective and the congress which authorized them, the president of the foremost woman's college in America wrote:

"'I am amazed, not at congress, but at the people, who seem for the first time in history to contemplate graft in high office with resignation.' The distinguished educator must have meant some of the people, for I cannot believe that more than a negligible number regard with unconcern either the ignominy uncovered or the palpable falsehood of the republican platform in its assertion that 'the recent congressional investigations have exposed instances in both political parties of men in public office who are willing to sell official favor.' If one democratic officeholder has been involved by the investigators for anything he did while in office, let hem benamed. But if it be true that the moral tone of our people has been so debased as to contemplate graft in high office with resignation, at whose doors shall the blame be laid if not at those of the republican party, whose spokesmen, appalled at first by the disclosures, rallied to level their guns, not at those guilty of the derelictions made public, but at those who had laid them bare.

White House Is Refuge.

"The president of the United States himself has not hesitated to endeavor to shield the delinquents from the public odium to which their derelictions have subjected them by joining in the hue and cry against the investigations that have been conducted under the authority of the senate and against that body for authorizing them. His message on the subject had for its plain purpose the supression of an inquiry into the official conduct of a member of his cabinet. It is true he has historic warrant, if precedent be a warrant, for his attitude. When the British house of commons sought to investigate the profligate and corrupt Duke of Buckingham in connection with the ill-fated descent upon Cadiz, Charles wrote that body, 'I see you especially aim at the Duke of Buckingham. I must let you know that I will not allow any of my servants to be questioned among you, much less such as are of eminent place and near to me.' Charles lost his head and Calvin Coolidge may profit politically by his example!

Nation on Trial.

"I repeat I cannot admit the accusation that the people of America are indefferent to the corroding influence of corruption to office, high or low. But we shall see. They are on trial. If, notwithstanding, what has transpired the party now in power in the nation is continued in control by the choice of the people of the United States, apparent or real, what judgment must be passed upon them by the world? They enjoy the distinction of having erred and maintained a government whose officers are as free from suspicion of venality as those of any nation on earth, and they will not, I venture to predict, forfeit it.

"In the hour of the triumph of materialism and selfishness, when the policy of isolation was said to have been overwhelmingly indorsed; when, as stated, every sordid interest came clamoring to Washington, the republican party entered upon the task of revising the tariff. No portentous voice now dispersed the invidious lobby overnight. The schedules show its handiwork. Higher than ever before mounted the rates. 'If I had my way,' said Senator Gooding, of Idaho, 'I would make the duty so high that there would be a complete embargo against every manufactured article that can be produced in this country.'

Isolation Is Tariff Mate.

"There is an equisite harmony between the policy of isolation and of a protective tariff as conceived by this statesman, and as exemplified in the act of 1922. Why trouble ourselves about the troubles of Europe? Let her stew in her own juice. Let us not even trade with her. Of course no such policy was or could be pursued.

"A decent respect for the unfortunate ultimate consumer placed some restraint upon the rapacity of the favorseekers. The promptings of a common humanity no less than the distress of agriculture reiying upon markets across the sea forced a grudging attention to conditions pervailing and events transpiring there. The people of Europe have been constantly calling upon our private citizens to aid in bringing order out of the chaos there, intensifying the impoverishment due to the war. Elihu Root went at their request to assist in drafting the statute for the world court, John Basset Moore to sit as one of its judges. Abram Elkus to arbitrate the Aaland Island dispute, Norman Davis to adjust the Poland-Lithuanian boundary controversy, Henry Morgenthau to promote the establishment in industry of the Greek refugees, Shotwell and General Bliss to work out a disarmament program. But the government of the United States must do nothing lest the irreconciliables disrupt the republican party.

"For the harmony thus secured and prosperity enjoyed by the tariff beneficiaries the farmers of the northwest have paid until bankruptcy among them is general.

Disaster Grips Northwest.

"No such disaster has ever befallen that section. A depressed period of the nineties on which republican orators discanted for a generation bore no comparison to the present deplorable era. According to the secretary of agriculture, 40 per cent of all the farmers in South Dakota are virtually bankrupt; 42 per cent in Colorado; 50 per cent in North Dakota; 51 per cent in Wyoming; 62 per cent in Montana and approximately 25 per cent in the hitherto prosperous states of Iowa and Minnesota. The farmer's dollar, measured by the standard of 1913, buys only 64 cents worth of commodities, the price of his produce falling in accordince with world prices while everything he must buy is held to the war level by the tariff.

"Though conditions are most acute in the northwest, every product that must find a foreign market is affected. Banks are suspending at the rate of more than 1,000 per year, signifying serious readjustments of the most far-reaching character. We are officially informed that the net change of population from farm to town during 1923 was over 1,200,000, accelerating a movement in progress in recent decades that had already excited general alarm.

Unemployment Is Guage.

"The tremendous reduction in the purchasing power of the farm population is already reflected in increased unemployment in most of the leading cities.

"In the face of an impending national calamity the republican party is impotent. Held fast by the great monopolistic beneficiaries of the tariff it dare not lower the rates even on those commodities, a reduction in the price which would be of immediate benefit to the farmer, lest the whole structure should tumble. Hoping for another victory in perseverance in its opposition to the only plan yet devised by the nations looking to the outlawry of war it dare not take a step toward the pacification of Europe, with a view to the restoration of its normal participating power, lest it be wrecked by the passions it aroused to accomplish the rejection of the covenant of the league of nations for no better reason than that it was sponsored by a democratic president. It has no remedy, it offers no relief from the paralysis that afflicts agriculture, threatening every form of industry. Moreover, it finds itself plagued with representatives in both houses of congress, representatives of current thought amoung their constituencies, holding views so radically antagonistic to those of the dominant faction in the party as to preclude the possibility of uniting on any program of legislation. Its frantic efforts to rid itself of the embarrassment of these insurgent members is as ludicrous as it will prove futile. They cannot be shaken off. They have the indorsement of the people. No regular or stand-pat republican could make headway against any one of them. They represent a revilt in a region overwhelmingly republican against the policies of the republican party.

Democrats Wrote Tax Act.

"With their aid the democratic members of the congress wrote the revenue act lately approved in defiance of the recommendation of the president and his secretary of the treasury, a chapter in history of congressional legislation without, it is believed, a parallel. They encouraged, promoted and actively aided in the investigations of the executive department in conjunction with the democratic members and cooperated with them in securing appropriate action in touching the revelations made by the various committees. They revolted against the choice of the majority of their party for the chairmanship of one of the leading committees of the senate and elevated a democratic member to that place. The republican party has ceased to be an organization through which the business of the country can be carried on. Nor is that the end of the antagonisms within the party.

"The president was at odds with the majority wing, with which he is supposed to be sympathetic, on the world court, the pension bill, the adjusted compensation bill, and, to a greater or less extent on the immigration bill. And now to cap the climax unseeming dissensions rend the party organization charged with the conduct of the campaign about to begin. If these be not the signs of dissolution, at least disaster may be read in the formal severance of any allegiance which may subsist on the part of the so-called progressive wing of the party about to duplicate the revolt of 1912 and effect an independent organization.

Stands On Party Record.

"Upon the record of the democratic party, through eight years of glorious history from 1913 to 1921, we submit that it should again be entrusted with the direction of our national affairs. There is no blot upon that record. It shines resplendent. No like period in our history is more crowded with great events or has presented problems more profound. It is signalized by the enactment of more legislation for the common good than is recorded in our annals for any other equal number of years. The exigencies arising from the sudden outbreak of the war in 1914 and the collapse of the world's system of exchange were met in a fashion that defied criticism. When the nation eventually became involved in the sanguinary conflict its resources in men and material were marshaled in a way that astonished our allies and brought consternation to the ranks of our enemies. The financing of the great enterprise reflected the highest credit upon the party that undertook its direction. Though the towering genius, the rival in intellect of Jefferson, who held the helm in that period of stress and storm, is no more, the stricken statesman rests secure in the reverential regard of his countrymen. But his high ideals, his lofty purposes, his trust in the judgment of the plain people remain our heritage. Though he saw plainly and pointed unerringly to the evils in the body politic, it is in no sense derogatory to his fame, that the legislation conceived to meet the situation which gave lustre to this administration was the work of other more practiced and perhaps practical, if less brilliant minds. The mutations in their ranks have in no wise operated to impair their efficiency as a body or make them less responsive to the heart throbs of the plain people. Witness the revenue law of the last session before referred to. Had it suited the purpose of those who sought at such trouble and expense to secure a popular verdict in favor of the Mellon plan to invite an expression on it as against the plan embodied in the law, the former would have been condemned emphatically by the test as it was by both houses of congress.

Tax Plans Are Comparison.

"The two schemes of tax reduction afford an illuminating answer to the intimation often carried in the inquiry as to the difference between the republican and democratic party. Each accomplished substantially the same reduction. Each released for investment in productive enterprises approximately the same amount of capital. But the plan of the president and his secretary gave the greatest relief relatively to the few overrich, the democratic plan to the many of small or modest means.

"And this in strict accord with the principle of the income tax that those should pay most who have the most with which to pay.

"In the process of the sums as we recede from the war period, further reduction in taxation is to be expected. It is an idle boast that five years after the cessation of hostilities a substantial reduction in our annual budget is noticeable.

"I know how eager the managers of the campaign for the reelection of President Coolidge are to switch the issues from honest government, the repeal of the new tariff of abominations, relief for agriculture and related reforms, to the League of Nations. It is not so necessary that we immediately join the league as it is that we abandon foolish antogonism to any world movement, however commendable in itself, merely because it is in some way associated with the league. We may confidently rely upon general support of a policy of active participation by our government in any effort that may be made through the league or any other channels to bring about a restoration of normal industrial activity in Europe and to establish a state of actual peace in every case in which it is reasonably safe to do so without entangling ourselves in the quarrels of its constituent nations or involving us in schemes of national aggrandizement or controversy distinctly political in character.

"The honor of our country, the prosperity of our people, demand that we return to the ideals of Woodrow Wilson, that we resume the place he won for us—the moral leadership of the world."

SENATE ADJOURNS AFTER BRIEF MEET

With preliminary business disposed of, the Georgia senate begins this morning its task of considering and enacting legislation for the state which will continue over a period of 50 days. The upper house of the legislature was called to order at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning by President George Carswel, and the 1924 session got under way. Following roll call, a prayer was offered by J. W. G. Watkins, of College Park, senate chaplain.

The opening session was brief, lasting but 35 minutes, when it was adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning by a resolution to adjourn out of respect to the late Senator J. B. Douglas, of the twenty-third district, who died since the last session of legislature. A resolution deploring the death of Senator Douglas was unanimously adopted.

Six New Bills.

Other than the roll call and administering of the oath of office to Senator Douglas' sucessor, his son, E. B. Douglas, of Talbot county, the only business of importance which came before the upper body Wednesday was the introduction of six new bills and two resolutions. For the first time in its history the senate opened the session with no legislation ready for action. All unfinished business from last session was in various stages of progress.

A resolution was concurrently adopted with the house, calling for appointment of three members of the house to serve with two from the senate as a committee to notify Governor Clifford Walker that both branches of the legislature had convened in regular session and were ready to hear any recommendations he might have. The senate committee reported back that the governor stated that he would have a communication in writing to deliver to both houses at a later date.

After the new senator, E. B. Douglas, had ben sworn in by Judge Alexander W. Stephens, of the court of appeals, recess was taken subject to call of the chair on a motion by Senator Pace. Resolutions caused reconvening almost immediately.

A resolution was adopted, submitted by Senator Hamby, of the Fortieth district, asking appointment of a joint tax committe of senate and house members.

Important New Bill.

Prominent among the new legislation which came before the upper house at Wednesday's session was a resolution submitted by Senator Pace, of the Thirteenth district, which if adopted would limit the present session of general assembly to 25 days and adjournment sine die would come July 19. The resolution does not come under the heading of privileged business and must lie on the table after introduction for one day before it can be acted upon.

A new bill introduced by Senator Stovall, of the Twenty-ninth, asks for abolishment of capital punishment in Georgia.

Other new measures introduced at Wednesday's session included a bill by Senator Phillips, of the Eighteenth district, seeking to abolish hanging as a means of executing the sentence of death and to provide for a system of electrocution.

Senator Smith, of the Twenty-third, introduced a measure calling for creation of Peach county and the defining of its borders.

A bill introduced by Senator Green, of the Forty-third district, asks for amendment to section 216 of the penal code, to define the acts constituting the offence of trespassing.

A bill to prescribe the time for holding superior courts in counties comprising the Flint circuit was introduced by Senator Smith, of the Thirty-fifth district.

Senator Johnson, of the Twenty-fourth district, presented a bill which would enable electric street, suburban or interurban railroad companies to acquire, own or hold capital stock, bonds or other securities or evidence of indebtedness of corporations which own and operate motor buses or trackless trolleys.

MERCER NINE FORMED FOR SUMMER

Macon, Ga., June 25.—(Special.)—After a brief resting spell, baseball is again to take the sports interest of the Mercer university campus. A collection of regulars who are hereabouts attending the college summer school have banded themselves together with promising prospects and expect to uphold the record of the Orange and Black aggregations on the diamond against what may come or go during the warm days when most college athletes are anywhere but taking classwork.

Clay Ryals, "Shorty" Poore, next year's diamond captain and "Ank" Alford, of the varsity, are on the campus and expect to mix it with rival sphere clouters. Ryals is among the best of the hurlers Mercer has produced in several years, and the summer nine will not lack in this respect. He will be reenforced by "Doc" Ballard, erstwhile student, medical man, keeper of the gym, and worshiper of all things Mercerian.

Team is Selected.

"Son" Sammons, lanky gridiron end, is to try his hand on first. Sid Ellison, of basketball fame, is to adorn second, while Roy Hurst, originator of the past year's glee club successes, is to manage third. Gene Cook will be introduced to Mercer baseballdom in the role of shortstop. Dave Rice, officially dubbed by a student-body vote, the handsomest man on the campus during the past year, will reign behind the home plate.

The outfield of the summer colzan" Bowling, who won fame as a plunging halfback; Poore, for three years a varsity diamond performer, and by Alford, who demonstrated his wares during the last season to some extent. In the order named, they will fill the right field, center and left.

Games are expected to be held with the Valdosta stars, the University of Georgia summer school, local teams from the Bibb mills, Central of Georgia and other nines

Loose Playing in Insurance League

BY M. D. GLEASON.

The three games in the Insurance league at Piedmont park yesterday were not up to the standard, the three strongest clubs meeting the three weaker teams, the result being three very much one-sided games.

The A. H. Turner team, the league leaders, swamped the Automobile Association club by the score of 17 to 0. The main trouble about this game from the Automobile fellows' standpoint was that there was too much work done by "Lefty" Larsen, who was pitching for the Turner team. He was very stingy in dealing out base-hits and was mean enough to strike out 15 of them on a hot day.

The batteries were Bryant, Chambers and Jordan for the Automobile association; Larsen and Gulledge and Jones for A. H. Turner. Umpire, Owen Pack.

North Americans Win.

The North Americans won from the Commercial Union club by the score of 18 to 5. Burnett, pitcher for the losers, did some wonderful work, striking out 16 men in 7 innings, but received very poor support from his teammates.

The batteries in this game were Schane and Singleton for North Americans, Burnett and Kennan for the Commerical Union. Umpire, W. T. Barber.

Fireman's Fund Wins.

The third game was between the Fireman's Fund and the Royal Insurance club, in which the Fireman's Fund won by the score of 16 to 3. "Wink" Robinson and "Woody" Starnes both took turns in the pitcher's box and playing second base for the Fireman's Fund. They struck out 14 men.

The batteries were Harrison, Everett and Littleton for the Royals. Robinson, Starnes and "Irish" Lyle for the Fireman's Fund. Umpire, O. T. Bishop.

'Cowboy' Weston To Play Tonight

"Cowboy" Weston, former world billiard champion, now manager of the Crescent billiard parlors on Alabama street, will play C. B. "Slick" Mathews in a 100-point match tonight.

Mathews is one of the best players in Atlanta and Weston has offered $10 to the player that defeats him.

Weston has been playing matches with the best players in this section every week. The former champion has been easy winner each time. He plans to represent Atlanta in the national tourney this fall.

YDE STARS AS PIRATES WIN.

Pittsburg, June 25.—Pittsburg defeated Chicago, 8 to 7, in a 14-inning game today in which Emil Yde, Oklahoma City southpaw, starred both in the box and at bat for the Pirates. Yde's double in the ninth with two out sent the game into extra innings and his triple in the fourteenth with two on base won the game.

ALBANY AND VALDOSTA WILL PLAY FOR TITLE

Thomasville, Ga., June 25.—(Special.)—Albany and Valdosta will lock horns tomorrow in a great game of golf to decide the winner of the championship cup of the Georgia-Florida Golf league. The game will be played in Albany and will give the team of that city a little the advantage as being on its own links.

The games tomorrow will close the league season for this year. Thomasville will play Tallahassee and Quitman will play Moultrie. The season has been a good one and much interest has been taken in the games. Golf is a great game in South Georgia and the league games have helped to keep up the interest in it.

The famous Premier mine in South Africa has produced no less than $115,000,000 worth of diamonds.

"RUBE" BEATS PELS.

Little Rock, June 25.—Robinson allowed only four hits today and Little Rock defeated New Orleans 3 to 2. The veteran left-hander was in fine form and struck out 6 batters. An error and a fluke home run by Withrow accounted for the only runs made off him. Lapan's pinch single and a triple by Moore were the deciding hits.

VOLS SWAMP BARONS.

Nashville, Tenn., June 25.—Nashville made a clean sweep of the four-game series with Birmingham by winning a farcical game today, 18 to 3. Good, who started the game, was removed on account of wildness and Jones was ejected in the seventh for protesting a decision. Jeanes pitched the remaining one-third inning and Clarke the next. Birmingham used every player except Lundgren. Alten was never seriously threatened after Nashville accumulated a five-run lead in the first.

150 GOLFERS ENTERED IN STATE TOURNAMENT HERE

RACING LISTS AT LAKEWOOD CLOSE TODAY

Closing of the entry lists today for the harness event of the turf program for Lakewood park on the Fourth of July probably will see 35 of the best horses of the southeast marked up for the four races. Last night 28 horses were in the Lakewood stables with the names of their owners on the books and not less than seven more were expected to show up early today to get under the line, set for 11 p.m.

Entry lists for the auto races will remain open until the day of the speed fest, July 4, it was announced last night by Lakewood officials. Several drivers are entered already and a score of others are expected to send in their names before Independence day. No fee is charged.

Purses amounting of $1,200 will be offered in the trotting and pacing events and a limit of two horses from one stable applies to all races. Five horses will be required in each event and four must start. Rules of the National Trotting association will govern the officials.

Turner Dressley has one of the largest strings of fine horses at the track now. They include Alvin Bond, Justo J., and Belle Onward, all fast steppers. Billy Lotz has Dick Wilson at the track and Cannon and Goodman, of Concord, N. C., have some of their best under preparation at the hands of Dick Rodgers. George Styles, of Rome, Ga., has entered his horses, but will not arrive for several days at the Lakewood tracks.

ROBERTS ON CARD HERE JULY 3

"Tiny" Fred Roberts, former athletic star of Oglethorpe university, who quit school to become a professional prize fighter and who has won one out of his two starts, will fight Jack Vogt, formerly of Montana, in the semi-windup card of the championship fight here next Thursday, July 3, between Lee Anderson and Tiger Flowers.

This will be Roberts' first professional ring appearance in Atlanta and the former Petrel star is expected to be an attraction second only to the main go. "Tiny" has been coming forward at a rapid stride and recently scored an impressive knockout victory over Jack Brooks at Greenville, S. C. Roberts kayoed his man in the second round.

He has been training faithfully since that scrap and in addition to his ring activities is making a crop on a farm near Atlanta. Vogt has recently moved to Athens from Montana and even before his removal to Georgia was anxious to get a crack at Roberts. Vogt is now engaged in operating a brick yard at Athens, and fights for love of the fistic game.

Vogt has battled some of the toughest men in the heavier division and has mixed punches with cowboys and other rough customers of the open spaces of the west. The two heavyweights will fight eight rounds.

Flowers is now in Grand Rapids, Mich., where Friday night he winds up his heavy training for Anderson in a battle with "Tut" Jackson. Immediately after that fight Flowers will speed back to Atlanta and finish his work here in public.

Anderson is scheduled to arrive Monday and will work out publicly at the Business Men's Athletic club at 87 1-2 Peachtree street.

Yaarab Temple Nine Is Defeated

Making their first appearance on a local diamond this year, the Yaarab Temple baseball nine was defeated by the fast College Park nine yesterday afternoon by a score of 13 to 9. It will be remembered that the College Park team won over the Federal Prison aggregation Sunday at the Fort in a 13 inning contest.

In spite of the slugging during the game, it was interesting from beginning to end. In the first three innings both teams were smashing the ball to all corners of the lot. But in the latter part of the game the slugging ceased, and the pitchers had their turn.

"Dago" Allen was on the hill for College Park, but was later relieved by Roberts. He was the hitting star for his team, getting a double and triple.

Laird, playing right field for the Temple, was the hitting star of the afternoon, getting three clean bingles out of four trips to the bat. Hanlin, backstop, for the same team got three out of five.

The score by innings:	R.	H.	E.
Yaarab Temple 340 011 0—	9	15	3
College Park...603 112 x—13	13	5

Batteries — Allen, Roberts and Stone; Speer, Garner and Hanlin.

Play in Georgia State Tourney Today

Reading from left to right, is John Bachman, Rome youth who has created quite a bit of stir in southern golf circles of late. He is ready to play in the qualifying rounds of the state tourney which starts today at the East Lake course. Next is Watts Gunn, the youthful state champion from Macon, who will defend his title. Tess Bradshaw, local veteran, is shown next. On the extreme right is Felding Wallace, of Augusta, vice president of the Georgia Golf association.

Perry Adair Changes Plans To Enter East Lake Play; Others Expected in Today

BY GEORGE CONGDON.

The setting of last night's sun saw the final polishing of clubs, scrubbing of golf balls and tightening of form by 150 of Georgia's finest golfers for the qualifying round at East Lake today of the ninth annual Georgia state tournament.

Even last night's downpour failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the hundred and a half already signed and paired for today, for the course was perfectly baked and rain—possibly not as much as arrived last night—stood to improve rather than impair the condition of the course.

Not only will Watts Gunn, defending champion, play to retain his crown, contrary to reports a couple of days ago, but Perry Adair, former southern and Georgia champion, will be out to regain the championship he held once before. Adair notified officials yesterday from his hotel in Washington, where he was called on business, that he was stretching a point and would be all polished up to tee off in the qualifying play.

Scores of golfers from Atlanta, a dozen or more from Macon, a good delegation from Augusta, and single and pairs of individuals from 20 other Georgia cities dotted the great East Lake course yesterday in their preparation to fight for the state title.

Officials Jubilant.

Colonel Lowry Arnold, president of the state golf association that brought the championship into existence in 1916, and Lloyd Parks, who collects the money for the organization, were jubilant last night. They were joined in their joy dance by Fielding Wallace, vice president, of Augusta.

"We're going to open the biggest Georgia state tournament ever held tomorrow," declared Mr. Parks as he checked over names that ran well up toward 150. "Look at that list, and then think about the number of fellows who always wait until starting time to enter their names. Why, by 8:30 tomorrow morning we ought to have enough to fill a dozen flights."

Savannah's delegation, one of the largest scheduled, will arrive this morning and places in the starting lists are being held open for it.

Four comparative youngsters stand out prominently on the eve of the tournament for the Georgia crown. They are the defending champion, Gunn, of Macon; John Bachman, the Rome, Ga., phenom who made a 68 at Louisville in the recent southern; Charlie Black, Jr., who fought Louis Tachau, of Louisville, through seven extra holes is a southern championship flight match, and Ben Jones, who has been burning up both the East Lake and Druid Hills courses lately.

Bachman was enthusiastic yesterday over the home course of Bobby Jones. "You probably won't see me breaking a 70 around here, though," he said by way of warning to those who don't know East Lake. He went out in the morning in 37, broke on the in nine for a 43, but in the afternoon shot the back side again and showed a par 36, that included one six and two fives that he had to cover on the other six holes.

Ben Jones, who is only one representative of his family—there being Mike and Billy who don't shoot a poor game—was going around yesterday with an 80.

Gunn Going Well.

Watts Gunn was rather silent over the prospects, but reports from the course were that during his round with Dave Black, younger brother of Charlie, he was shooting a tailor-made brand of golf.

Augusta's delegation includes some of that town's best. In it are Marion Ridgely, H. L. Chafee, W. C. Kilgore, Bob Oertel and Fielding Wallace. Columbus also sent a bunch of big berthos here. They include Gordon Flournoy, L. D. Hill, F. W. Teague and Dana Blackmar, Jr.

Gunn in the qualifying round today will tee off with Veazey Rainwater, veteran of many a tough battle, and a mainstay of the Druid Hills team. Perry Adair is paired with Charlie Black, Jr.

Pairings for the qualifying round today are as follows:

Mrs. Mallory Defeated But Miss Wills Is Easy Winner

Wimbledon, England, June 25.—Mrs. Molla Mallory, Miss Eleanor Goss and Carl Fischer, members of the American tennis teams in the battle for the men's and women's and doubles championships, were defeated and retired from play Wednesday. In other battles waged on various courts before large crowds, as the fair weather continued, Helen Wills, the American women's champion, advanced in the tournament by winning from Miss Dranfield, of England, 6-0, 6-2, and Suzanne Lenglen, the world champion, easily turned aside Miss E. R. Clarke without losing a game. Thus in two matches the French woman has triumphed without having a game scored against her.

Mrs. Mallory lost to Miss Kitty McKane, probably the best of the English women players, who was unable to make much of a showing on her visit to America last year, probably because of the change in climate and other conditions. Miss McKane lost only one game to Mrs. Mallory, that one in the first set.

F. G. Lowe, one of the granddaddies of international tennis, conquered young Fischer with surprising ease, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3. Another old-timer, Norman Brookes, of the historic Australian teams, also disputed the progress of the younger generation, defeating D. R. Rutnam, 6-2, 6-2, 2-6, 6-1.

Other Results.

Miss Goss was put out by Mrs. Satterthwaite, 6-4, 6-4.

Other matches of the day went as follows:

Watson Washburn, of the United States, beat Fred Crawford, 6-4, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

R. N. Williams, American, beat P. Feret, 6-4, 4-6, 8-6, 6-4.

Elizabeth Ryan, a Californian but long a resident of England, defeated Mrs. Parton, 6-4, 8-6.

Mrs. Hazel Wightman, American, defeated Mrs. Saunders Taylor, 6-0, 6-2.

Mrs. Marion Jessup, American, beat Mrs. Bennett, 6-0, 6-2.

Vincent Richards and Francis Hunter, representing America in the men's doubles, defeated F. M. B. Foher and J. C. Peacock, of England, 3-6, 7-5 6-4 6-3.

Jean Borotra and Mlle. Lenglen, of France, won from G. S. Fletcher and Miss O. M. Walker in mixed doubles, 6-0, 6-1.

Carl Fischer and Miss Edith Sigourney, of America, defeated G. A. Thomas and Miss Hogarth, 6-3, 6-2.

Play in British Open Meet Gets Under Way Today

Hoylake, Eng., June 25.—(By the Associated Press.)—Fine weather, tempered by winds from the sea, is in prospect for the start of the British open golf championship tomorrow morning in which eighty professionals and six amateurs including five Americans are entered. Two rounds will be played tomorrow and two on Friday.

Most of the expert observers go no further than cautiously to predict that eight men—four Britons and four Americans—are most likely to be fighting for the trophy when the final round begins.

America's big four in the British golf classic are Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Jim Barnes and MacDonald Smith.

The British favorites are George Duncan, Abe Mitchell, Arthur G. Havers and F. R. Whitcombs.

In the draw for tomorrow which is at medal play, the first round beginning at 8:30 a. m. and the second at 1 p. m., Barnes will go around with Duncan; Sarazen with J. Bond, of Hillside; Hagen with P. G. Wyatt, Bush Hill park; MacDonald Smith with C. Sayner, of Doncaster, and Gil Nicholls with C. Johns, of Perly Downs.

Barnes and Duncan will tee off first. At the tail end of the procession will be Smith, whose second round is not scheduled to begin until afternoon. Nicholls starts at 10 in the morning and Hagen a few minutes later.

Sarazen will tee off shortly before noon. There have been no showers or rainstorms at Hoylake for several days. As a result of the lack of moisture and 16 hours or more of daily sunshine the championship course is becoming fast.

In addition to the Britons and Americans there is a trio of Frenchmen—Aubrey Boomer, Raymond Botcazow, of La Boulie, and Arnaud Massy, of Neville.

The half dozen amateurs who survived the qualifying round are Cyril Tolley, Roger Wethered, Ernest Hassall, Samuel Robinson, M. S. Walker, of the Royal Liverpool club, and W. L. Hope.

Tech Hi Boy Leads in Shoot

Shooting a perfect 50 in the 500-yard slow fire match on the range at Fort McPherson, Carl Spangler, of the Tech Hi rifle team and a member of Company C, 122d infantry, led the field in the Georgia State Rifle tournament's events yesterday. Spangler is captain of the Tech Hi rifle team of next year.

Sergeant Dupont Kinney, of headquarters company, 59th infantry brigade, was tied for second with a 47 in the 500-yard slow fire shoot. Private J. T. Day, Company I, of the 121st, also had 47.

In the other event of yesterday, the 300-yard slow fire, Sergeant Frank Klarpp of Company C, 121st, was winner with 46.

Sergeant J. R. Waite, Troop B, 108th cavalry, and Captain Thomas Alexander, Company C, 122d infantry, tied for next honors with 45.

The events today will be the 600-yard slow fire and the 200-yard rapid fire.

Marietta Beats New Holland, 10-0

Marietta, Ga., June 25.—(Special.)—Marietta toyed with New Holland here today in a listless game that ended 11 to 0 in favor of the home club. Hamilton, on the mound for Marietta, struck out the first five men to face him and eased up when his team mates gathered six runs in the second inning.

Elder, pitching for New Holland, pitched a fair game but was given wretched support. The visitors were plainly outclassed in all departments of the game. Bryant led the attack for the locals with one triple, two doubles and one single out of five times at bat.

Copperhill, Tenn., will play in Marietta Saturday, and in Cartersville Friday.

Turner Barber Goes to Memphis

Memphis, Tenn., June 25.—(Special.)—Turner Barber, centerfielder of the Little Rock Travelers, comes to the Chicks and Gene Morrison, centerfielder of the Chicks, goes to the Travelers in a deal between the two clubs tonight made public by Tom Watkins, president of the Memphis club.

In addition to Morrison the Memphis club paid a cash amount for Barber. Barber is due here tomorrow and Morrison left tonight for Little Rock.

Barons Start Four-Game Series With Crackers Today

The Crackers enjoyed a well earned rest yesterday, but in spite of large injury list, are ready for a four-game series with the Birmingham Barons, the first of which will start today.

A single game will be played Friday, while a double-header is slated for the Saturday afternoon program.

The Cracker squad arrived back in the city yesterday from the Chattanooga series in which the locals copped the best two out of three played.

Mack Hillis was the one to add his name to the hospital list on returning here. Hillis was injured in a collision with Wingfield in Monday's game. He will not be ready for duty for the next few days because of a strained knee.

Roy Moore took over the center garden, while Bill McCabe played at first. Dick Burrus is still out because of an attack of yellow jaundice, but will be ready for duty within the next few days.

The Barons are due to arrive early this morning after a rather disastrous series with the Nashville Vols. They are not in the best of shape and Crackers should take at least three out of the four games scheduled.

Just who Niehoff will pitch today is doubtful. It is time for Hollis McLaughlin to work, but Ray Francis may be used.

Tom Loughran Substituted As Strib's Opponent Tonight

New York, June 25.—(Special.)—Ted Moore, an Englishman, with a long left jab and a rather harmless right hand, faces the opportunity tomorrow evening of winning the middleweight championship of the world, when he meets Harry Greb, the title holder, in a fifteen-round battle at the Yankee stadium.

The promoters of the milk fund carnival have arranged a great card, but it looked as though their best bet had fallen through when it was found that Paul Berlenbach, the Astoria sensation, would be unable to go through with his bout with Young Stribling, due to a deep gash he received over his left eye in his recent match with K. O. Jaffe.

The milk fund promoters hustled to Philadelphia and endeavored to sign up Ad Stone. Ad recently lost a decision to the ancient Charley Weinert. His services were not available and Tommy Loughran was signed up. Loughran, while he is no world beater, is a clever boxer and should give Stribling an interesting argument. There is little chance that there will be any damage done.

It was reported tonight that Stribling and Berlenbach are to meet at the New York Velodrome early in July and that the top price for this card is to be $10. Berlenbach was anxious to face Stribling for the benefit of the milk fund show. Berlenbach states that despite his wounded port lamp he is quite capable of disposing of Stribling.

This bout is a top liner and many promoters have been after it. The pair have received an offer of $50,000 to meet in Canada, it is said.

COMMISSION SUSPENDS PLAYERS

The baseball commissioners of the amateur baseball leagues of the city made it plain today that the players of the city had to live up to the rules when they suspended four members of the Central Baptist team.

It was brought out in the evidence that the players—Wilson, McFarland, Bagby and Griggs, were the property of the Peachtree Road club. It was alleged that these players after playing in six games with the Peachtree Road team left the team without notice and became members of the Central Baptist outfit.

Akridge, captain of the Central Baptist team, made a strong plea in behalf of the players, stating that the players were not under a written contract with the Peachtree Road club and that all rules of the Perrin Sunday School league had been complied with in signing the players.

It was also brought out that the players had asked for their release and had given the Peachtree Road team notice of their leaving the team.

While the Peachtree Road manager admitted that the players were not under a written contract, it was brought out that the players were under a verbal contract, which the commissioners ruled was sufficient.

Player Bagby was suspended for one week while players Griggs, McFarland and Wilson were suspended for two weeks.

The commissioners are trying to do everything to upbuild amateur baseball in Atlanta and all players are warned that the rules of their leagues must be strictly complied with.

The Central Baptist team will play their regular scheduled game Saturday.

Present McAdoo to Delegates As Born Progressive Leader

New York, June 25.—William G. McAdoo was placed in nomination for the presidency at the democratic national convention today by former Senator James D. Phelan, of California, with the declaration that he is the "natural leader of progressive thought and achievement."

"This year demands the return of triumphant democracy," said Mr. Phelan. "The progressives of the nation look to the democratic party for their leader. Shall we give him to them? There is room in America for but one reactionary party, and the republicans have pre-empted that field. The party's chance of success depends upon its choice for candidate for the presidency of this man."

Familiar With Problems.

Tracing Mr. McAdoo's career both in the government service and in private life, Mr. Phelan declared that the "vast problems of the continent are his familiar themes; the prosperity of farm and forest and mine, factors of natural growth and strength and transportation and irrigation, these are not strange subjects born of restricted environment and narrow outlook.

"In the broadness of his vision, his sympathetic understanding, his aggressive personality, his burning patriotism, he is an ideal American," continued the speaker. "And so the country will accept him.

"The vast machinery of the government rumbles discordantly along the road; the parts do not fit; the crew recreant and rebellious and the chosen chief engineer has been succeeded by the beneficiary of an accident.

Is Trained Executive.

"Where should the people in all prudence turn? Continue the inexperienced and inept, or take a trained and tried chief who can at once step into the cab and give command. We want a man who knows where he is going, and who is going where the people want him to go—capable, progressive, confident of his power and alert and eager to serve."

While Mr. McAdoo was secretary of the treasury, the convention was told, he "cleansed it of the foul growth of favoritism and repelled the insidious attacks of the powerful, made it the repository of the people's hopes and the instrumentality of sound finance, the safeguard of honest business and industrial prosperity."

"We honor President Wilson, who left a great heritage of character and achievement to the democracy," continued Mr. Phelan, "but we shall not forget the toiler by his side, the inspirer of ideas and the doer of things, the great secretary of the treasury in the most exacting and soul-testing administration since Lincoln's."

Knows Farm Needs.

Asserting that Mr. McAdoo understands the farmer's problems "far better than any aspirant for the presidency—either democrat or republican," Mr. Phelan added:

"From every side today come urgent demands for adequate solution of agricultural problems. What man is better equipped to solve them than this man, who was raised on a farm, who during his long administration of the treasury department, of the farm loan bureau and of the railroads, came into daily contact with farming problems of every description, and who had then and has now the vision to see the remedy and the courage to effect it?"

As for Mr. McAdoo's administration of the railroads, Mr. Phelan had this to say:

Favorite of Labor.

"The workers knew his sentiment toward labor. He gave them the eight-hour rule and overtime, and otherwise ameliorated their condition. Assuming complete control, he brought order out of chaos, relieved congestion, opened ports and, loyally supported by his men, successfully moved to tidewater—a vital operation—the tied-up troops and supply trains.

"While doing justice to railroad labor he yet remembered always the interest of the public. It is a striking fact that the total increase in the wages of railroad employees made in 1918 by McAdoo was approximately $608,000,000, while his successor further increased these wages $394,000,000, making the total of all increases under federal control $1,002,000,000.

"When on March 1, 1920, the railroads were restored to private control under the Esch-Cummins act, which established the United States labor board at Chicago and gave it jurisdiction over wages and working conditions, hearings were held and the labor board granted a further increase of $620,000,000 in addition to the total increases made during federal control. McAdoo dealt fairly with railroad labor. McAdoo gave railroad labor a square deal, nothing more.

Knows Rate Structures.

"Today another great problem which demands solution is the lowering of freight rates and improvement of railroad regulation. What man is better equipped for this job than the man who for the entire war period operated all the railroads of the country?"

As one of eight children, Mr. McAdoo, the delegates were told, has "known privation and has practiced self-denial; understands the problems of the poor; has the fiber of fortitude; and never quits.

"He is deeply grounded in American principles, the constitution and the law. He opposes any discrimination on account of religious belief. It is repugnant to his sterling Americanism.

"America was the protest of the free men of the world against the religious bigotry and persecutions of the past; and it is a matter of constitutional principle and precept to respect and protect the freedom of thought and speech—of religion, of press, of assembly.

"McAdoo stands for the supremacy of the law and for the enforcement of the law—the solemn duty of the executive. The treaty-making power and the congress, under the constitution and bill of rights, prescribe the law and that is the only law the president knows. It is the guide for his action and the ready weapon of the republic for its defense against the assaults of the ignorant or the intolerant."

M'ADOO TO THROW POWER IN EARLY

New York, June 25.—Nomination of William G. McAdoo by the end of the week is the objective of his supporters. Balloting at the democratic convention, they predict, will begin Friday.

After today's session a dozen or more of McAdoo's advisers went into conference with him to canvass the situation and perfect plans for the battle of ballots. Afterward David L. Rockwell, his campaign manager, declared he was convinced the convention was in no mood for a deadlock stretching into next week, and that every effort would be made by the McAdoo forces to wind things up, at least so far as the presidential nomination is concerned, by Saturday.

Continuing to express confidence as to the outcome Mr. Rockwell said the McAdoo lines not only had been held intact, despite reports from rival camps to the contrary, but that the candidate had a reserve strength that would surprise his opponents.

Declines Predictions.

Mr. Rockwell declined to make any prediction as to the strength McAdoo would poll on the first ballots or as to how many ballots would be required to name a candidates.

Apparently confident that McAdoo early will roll up a majority and of the opinion that if this occurs many delegates will conclude that a protracted deadlock can be avoided only if McAdoo is named, his managers seemed convinced it would be good strategy to press the issue at the outset.

Developments during the day, it was declared at McAdoo headquarters, were encouraging from every angle. The demonstration given the candidate at the convention after he had been placed in nomination appeared to please his lieutenants.

Says Klan Row Inspired.

Then, too, they said, reports reaching them from various delegations indicated that all is well, although some of the faithful had been uneasy earlier in the day on account of the activity of the enemy in attempting to make inroads in the McAdoo ranks.

No significance, at least with regard to Mr. McAdoo's candidacy, was attached by Mr. Rockwell to the anti-klan demonstration on the convention floor. The charge was made by him, however, that some leaders in the party, among them George E. Brennon, democratic national committeeman from Illinois, was seeking to stir up a row over the klan issue in the hopes of embarrassing Mr. McAdoo.

Will Not Enter the Hall.

Confidence was expressed by Mr. Rockwell that the platform committee would be able to harmonize views on all points, and a prolonged or bitter fight over the klan, league of nations, or any other issue, would be avoided.

The nomination of Mr. McAdoo will be seconded by Governor Sweet, of Colorado. Charles M. Hay, of Missouri; Mrs. Leroy Springs, of South Carolina, and probably Mrs. Alexander Thompson, of Oregon.

At no stage of the balloting does Mr. McAdoo intend to go near the convention hall, although he is in constant touch with his lieutenants on the floor by telephone, and expects to have radio apparatus installed in his hotel suite to get instantaneous reports when the voting begins. Today Mrs. McAdoo witnessed the demonstrations accorded her husband, but he remained in his hotel ten blocks away, not even hearing the outburst over the radio.

Senator Robinson Presented As 20th Century Crusader

New York, June 25.—The candidacy of Senator Joseph T. Robinson for the democratic presidential nomination was launched before the convention today by C. H. Brough, former governor of Arkansas, who eulogized his candidate "as a proven leader, who can unite all factions of our party, heal all party wounds, a 20th century crusader for the immortal principles of democracy and Americanism."

The former Arkansas governor said:

"Arkansas—the gateway to the great progressive southwest, a state that has given to the nation and to our great party such distinguished leaders as Augustus H. Garland, the attorney general of the United States under the administration of the intrepid Grover Cleveland; Judge U. M. Rose, president of the American Bar association, and one of our three representatives appointed by President Roosevelt to The Hague tribunal, and James P. Clarke, for six years president pro tem of the United States senate—offers to the nation today her most distinguished and brilliant son.

Merits Eulogy on Grant.

"A youth of adversity, a man of virtue and honesty, this distinguished native son of Arkansas has, by force of ability, dint of energy and dynamic personality, reached one of the highest places within the gift of our party. Elected to congress at the early age of 30, serving with distinction and ability for five consecutive terms in that great representative body, elected by an unprecedented majority as governor of his commonwealth and for the past twelve years a potent factor in the epochal deliberations of the United States senate, the gentleman whom I have the honor, on behalf of the Arkansas delegation, and who is the real choice of hundreds of thousands of friends and admirers throughout the nation, to present to this convention for its earnest, and we trust favorable action, merits the stately eulogy of Senator Conklin upon President Grant:

"'Great in the arduous greatness of things done.'

"In the stress of the world war and Armageddon of the nations, this red-blooded American stood as a rock of Gibraltar in his support of the constructive and progressive policies of our immortal leader who, combining the patriotism of a Washington, the philosophy of a Jefferson, the constructive genius of a Hamilton, the courage of Andrew Jackson, a Grover Cleveland and a Theodore Roosevelt, the broad philanthropy of an Abraham Lincoln and the judicial poise of a Taft, will, when history is properly written, be justly accorded his place as one of the world's immortals—Woodrow Wilson.

Right Stand on War.

"During this titanic struggle between liberty and democracy on the one hand, and the doctrine that might is right and strength is triumphant on the other—this statesman whose heart and brain are as big as America itself, boldly and eloquently proclaimed on the floor of the United States senate that there can be no twilight zone of American patriotism—every citizen of the United States must either be for his country and for his flag, or he is against his country and against his flag.

"That he has demonstrated rare qualities of leadership and political philosophy, which are particularly needed by our nation in this crisis of its economic and political life; that he is cool headed, 'broad backed, upright as the pines, and by the scale of a hemisphere shape his design;' that the elements in him are so mixed that all nature may say 'here is a man'—is proven by the fact that four years ago he was honored by his party with the permanent chairmanship of our great democratic convention over which he presided with such dignity and impartiality as to win the approval of all factions of our party; and that he was unanimously selected by his party colleagues in the United States senate as their masterful leader in directing the destines of our party, temporarily in the minority, but soon to be converted into a triumphant majority by the mandate of the American people, if party harmony prevails and no mistake is made by this convention in our selection of standard bearers.

Active In All Campaigns.

"This great American and tribune of the rights of the common people enjoys the respect, love and admiration of the American people. Since he reached his majority 30 years ago, he has taken an active part in every presidential campaign, and it is a significant fact that in every doubtful state in which he spoke during the last national campaign, at least one democratic United States senator and several democratic congressmen were elected.

"His services as a national campaigner have been in constant demand, and he has measured up to the highest traditions of American oratory and American statesmanship. He wears no man's collar; he is four square and honorable in every relation of life; he wears his conscience as his king, and the white flower of a blameless private and public life. In the prime of life, with an unbroken record of 22 years of public service, he would bring to the high office of president the maturity of experience and a thorough knowledge of every great public question.

"There is a legend in ancient lore that when the Moslems and Saracens surrounded a brave little band of Scots, battling for the heath and the highlands that they loved so well, when all seemed lost and the circling hosts were gradually tying the death noose tighter and tighter, Douglas arose in his stirrups and, seizing the silver casket that held the heart of Robert Bruce, threw it into the farthest ranks of the enemy, exclaiming 'follow—I conquer, or I die.' Little cared the Scotsmen then for the Moslem sword or scimitar; no enemy could withstand the onslaught of that devoted band, and today in Melrose Abbey there reposes the heart of Robert Bruce won again by Scottish valor.

Robinson Ideal Leader.

"Predatory interests and those whose political philosophy does not beat in unison with the heart throb of struggling humanity may encompass the champions of truth in their crusade for humanity, but when we fling the heart of the life and the teachings of this great American into the farthest ranks of the enemy, millions born and yet to be, will follow—will fight the good fight, and will conquer.

"I have the honor of presenting to this convention a great American who combines all the qualities of leadership that I have enumerated, a proven leader who can unite all factions of our party, heal all party wounds; a twentieth century crusader for the immortal principles of democracy and Americanism—Senator Joseph T. Robinson."

FIVE ARE SEIZED IN MAIL ROBBERY

Tulsa, Okla., June 25.—Two women and three men, arrested in a raid on a house here today, are being held by county authorities for investigation in connection with the recent $2,000,000 mail robbery near Chicago. Two hundred and forty-six $20 bills were seized in the raid.

Issue Attachments for Officers.

Chicago, June 25.—Superior Judge William Lindsay today issued attachments for eight federal officers who had failed to respond to summonses to appear before him in the inquiry into the action of state officials in turning over to federal authorities seven men and women held in connection with the $2,000,000 mail robbery on June 12.

Federal Judge Wilkerson, however, issued a temporary injunction restraining Sheriff Hoffman and his deputies from arresting the federal deputy marshals and assistant district attorneys named.

Mrs. Dolly Oglesby, 39, one of the party, was quoted by Sheriff R. D. Sanford as saying that three of her brothers were in the mail robbery and that one of them had been shot. She said her home was in Texas.

The other woman gave her name as Dorothy Wagner. She is a 19-year-old girl with bobbed hair and well dressed. The three men said they were sons of Mrs. Oglesby, John, 17; Louis, 21, and C. E., 18.

GEORGIA STANDARD RIVETED TO FLOOR

the many old-time melodies that always enliven a convention's dramatic moments.

While two-thirds of the states shot their standards into the wild, almost riotous parade, Charles Brown, of the Georgia delegation, secretly held Georgia's standard riveted to the floor. Thousands of eyes turned upon Georgia as the home of the klan, but the standard remained as still as are the ramparts of the imperial palace on North Peachtree street in Atlanta at midnight.

This demonstration followed shortly after the speech of the permanent chairman, Senator Walsh, of Montana, a McAdoo supporter and a Catholic. The demonstration was commented on significantly by leading klan officials of Atlanta, who were in the convention hall during the spectacular session.

Showed Klan Aims.

The political vitality of the klan was never more pronounced than at this convention. The grand dragon of Georgia and other klan officials came up with the Georgia delegation on the steamer and have been in close touch with members of the delegation in New York, including the two members here of Georgia's now-famous "secret cabal."

Other imperial officers of the klan are in New York, but klan hostility among the democratic hosts, except those from some sections of the south, shows the situation has become somewhat muddled for the klansmen and those who promised to protect the interests in this convention. In the meantime the resolutions committee is struggling with the klan issue. Cool heads among the old party leaders do not fully agree with Senator Underwood in the extremity of this proposed plank, but that the party will go on record as fully reaffirming its time-honored position in upholding the levels of the constitution, and in decrying racial and religious intolerance is assured. If the klan issue gets to the floor the Underwood plank, or one equally as strong, would actually pass. The issue, however, will be worked out along cool, constructive lines and not in any spirit of a punitive assault.

To Bunch Klan Power.

This will not be due to the efforts of klan officials here, or any one agreeing to "protect" them, however, but as a result of a satisfying compromise between extremists on both sides. This convention will break the backbone of the Ku Klux Klan as a secret, invisible political factor.

As to candidates, the third day of the convention will show as strong and as problematical deadlock as ever. Mr. McAdoo did not gain by today's events—not even by the speech of his nominating orator. Smith has no chance of the ultimate nomination, though his demonstration tomorrow will be spectacular and noisy. In the meantime Davis is slipping, Ralston is gaining, and Glass, Meredith and Copeland are all gaining in the order named.

DEMONSTRATORS GET NO GEORGIA AID.
BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

Madison Square Garden, New York, June 25.—(United News.)—Two roof-raising, colorful demonstrations, one of which provoked several physical encounters, marked the second sweltering of the democratic national convention.

One was a spontaneous outburst against the Ku Klux Klan.

The other was an elaborately staged demonstration for McAdoo lasting one hour and two minutes. The klan outburst occurred while Senator Oscar Underwood, of Alabama, an outright opponent of the hooded order, was being placed in nomination.

After Senator Walsh had made his speech and received a signal demonstration, the convention swung into the business of placing candidates in nomination.

Alabama was called first and Forney Johnston, a small, unimpressive person, took the platform. Delegates sat indifferently through his speech until he attacked the Ku Klux Klan, mentioning it by name.

Instantly the convention was in an uproar. Delegates who a moment before had been fanning themselves into a summer midday doze jumped up. In another instant the convention was torn into two camps, the anti-klan forces yelling and marching around the hall, the other pro-klan group sitting down, determinedly refusing to participate in the demonstration.

Alabama led the parade around the hall with Wisconsin and New York prominent in procession, but California, Texas, Tennessee, Georgia, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, West Virginia, Washington and Oregon held their standards in place and refused to join. Around each of these standards McAdoo delegates clustered to prevent some outsider dashing in and carrying it off.

All the while there was a great roar pierced with rebel yell, high-pitched shouts of women, roars of leather-lunged westerners, the blaring of the band and the scuffling of thousands of feet.

With the aid of the band Chairman Walsh finally restored order.

Paris Bakers Strike.

Paris, June 25.—The journeymen bakers of Paris have voted an immediate strike, demanding abolition of night work and the institution of higher wages. The government is preparing to open military bakeries and to protect the master bakers able to continue operations.

Klan Denunciation Features Underwood Nominating Talk

New York, June 25.—The demand of Senator Oscar W. Underwood, of Alabama, to condemn by name the political activities of the Ku Klux Klan was voiced at the convention today by Forney Johnston, of Alabama, as the keynote of his speech placing Mr. Underwood's name before the convention for the presidential nomination.

"No bare reference to the constitution or the bill of rights, actually mentioned in the klan oath, is adequate in this connection," Mr. Johnston declared. "The bill of rights are limitations only upon the state and federal governments, and not upon private conspiracy. That is why the candidate of my people has insisted upon plain words.

"The question before this party is whether secret organizations shall be given powers immune from the bill of rights and superior to those delegated to the elected representatives of the people.

"Above all, does the candidate we represent condemn the massed action of secret political orders in furtherance of any objective, which is plainly contrary to the spirit of the constitution?

Reads Anti-Klan Plank.

"In order to express squarely his opinion on this grave question, I have, at his request, introduced a resolution, reciting the established position of our party on that precise issue referring to the resolution of 1856 and concluding with this resolving clause:

"'Resolved, That we do reaffirm the principles set forth in the said resolution of the democratic platform of 1856 and condemn as un-American and undemocratic political action by secret or quasi-secret organizations in furtherance of any political objective whatsoever, and in particular do we condemn such action for the purpose of proscribing the political rights and privileges of citizens of the United States, as is now proposed, practiced and publicly acknowledged by the organizations known as the Ku Klux Klan, and as may now or hereafter be proposed or practiced by any organization whatsoever.'"

Senator Underwood, Mr. Johnston said, had no word to say against those who joined any order, secret or otherwise, organized for lawful purpose or to advocate openly any principle within the scope of legitimate public discussion.

Objects to Participation.

"What he does condemn is the participation in politics by any secret organization whatsoever," the speaker continued. "He believes that such action intimidates public officials and encourages political or oath-bound pledges contrary to public policy."

At another point Mr. Johnston said the outstanding characteristic of the democratic party was that it stood for the protection of human rights by protecting public officials "against organized oppression and intimidation." Senator Underwood had requested, he said, that his position be made plain beyond misunderstanding by the delegates on this grave issue, and added:

"He believes that unless the issue is met with candor and dignity in this campaign, you will not only invite the disintegration of this party, but will take a backward step so wholly inconsistent with the basis of a modern liberal government as to be too unthinkable for the democratic party to accept or condone."

The speaker described Senator Underwood as one whose "only employer for more than a quarter of a century last past has been the people of the United States."

Has No Entanglements.

"If a man ever lived in modern times apart from embarrassing or entangling associations or environment, it is the man we now propose," Mr. Johnston declared. "If any citizen of concern is found guilty of offense against the federal laws involving moral turpitude, there is no reason, personal, professional or otherwise, why his administration should not press the prosecution to the point of penal servitude.

"The one indispensable requisite of your choice is that it fall on a man of such exalted character that neither Wall street nor Main street, boulevard or alley, neither partisan journal nor wayside assassin dare impeach his character without earning immediate derision. Such a man is this democrat whom we place in nomination."

Taking up in his opening remarks the need that the democratic convention nominate a man in "this crisis in public morals to restore to the people deserved confidence in their public concerns," Mr. Johnston continued:

"The republican party organization misunderstood its victory in 1920, which was nothing more than the instinctive reaction of the people against the administration immediately responsible for war taxes and for the unavoidable exercise of abnormal federal powers incident to war.

G. O. P. Become Corrupt.

"Its officials came into power in 1921, exultant, over-confident and in a state of suspended morals as a result of that victory, and their party organization promptly lost its conscience and its capacity to analyze men and motives, or to reconcile in the public interests its internal conflicts over the use of the powers of government. As a result of the convention at Cleveland, the nation has discovered the complete breakdown of republican morals and the loss of its courage.

"The corruption in the administration of Grant resulted in what we democrats know to have been the rejection of his party by the democratic forces under Tilden. The high character of General Grant did not stay that result, nor will the personal integrity of Coolidge and Dawes stay a like result today.

"The republican machine must stand aside, for the people of this country will not allow their government to be betrayed with impunity. And remember, that the scandals of the present regime are not even yet plumbed or charted in depth and extent, and are neither punished nor repented."

TAGGART PARADES HIS RALSTON BOOM

New York, June 25.—The Ralston candidacy, piloted by Thomas Taggart, met a lot of company at home and abroad today.

This was the first time that Taggart had taken the infant boom out for a walk away from his headquarters, and he didn't do it then after the manner of exhibiting his prodigy. He just "called to pay his respects" at the headquarters of various candidates, and, of course, when somebody brought his child into the conversation, he blushed like a proud parent and thanked them modestly. No more than that. Distinctly he was not seeking flattering comment about the offspring, he made it plain, and when there was talk at several places about giving prominence to the Indiana senator, Taggart just smiled his thanks and declared he would be mighty appreciative "when the time comes" but that was all. At Taggart's headquarters in the Waldorf the Ralston boom was on display every minute that Taggart wasn't out visiting. A large number of delegates, some of them pledged to other candidates, particularly from middle western and western states, called to discuss the Indiana senator. The first question Taggart asked all of them was whether they were pledged. If they said they were, he urged them to vote for their man until he was out of the race.

Want no Broken Pledges.

"If you want to come to Ralston after your man is out of the race, we shall appreciate your coming, but we don't want to be a party to any broken pledges," Taggart said.

What with hot weather and carrying a young boom to many places around town, the day was a hectic one for Taggart.

Scarcely had he got out of bed today when some of the overzealous Hoosiers, much wrought up over reports that Ralston was in ill health, decided it would be a good thing to bring the senator here and show the folks that he is capable of pitching hay in mid-June, just as they say he is. When Taggart heard of this, he told the proposers to forget it, and issued a statement declaring Ralston never intended to come here and would not think of it.

He Sees Smith and McAdoo.

With the opening of the convention, Taggart received company at his aisle seat, scattering good words for all candidates. And then, a few minutes after the convention got under way, he left to call on William G. McAdoo at the McAdoo headquarters. They had a chat about this, that and the other, as old friends will, Taggart said. No body except the two men were present, and what they said is a secret. Insiders at the McAdoo camp, however, said there was no deal made at the conference. And so did Taggart.

Having called on one outstanding candidate, Taggart went over to see Governor Smith at the latter's hotel. It was just another social call, of course, it was explained at the Indiana headquarters. There was mention of the Ralston candidacy, but just in passing.

Going back to the convention, Taggart conferred with George E. Brennan, of Illinois, and then hurried back to his hotel, remarking as he left:

Brennan Has Umbrella.

"The Ralston boom is blowing up a little rain, George."

"I'll have my umbrella up when it comes," Brennan replied.

Ralston will be nominated tomorrow by Fred Van Nuys, his law partner, in a short speech. No attempt at a prolonged demonstration will be made by the Hoosier crowd. The band is expected to play "On the Banks of the Wabash," and the delegates are going to whoop and holler some, but they won't set out to break the McAdoo demonstration record, for instance.

Ralston followers confidently expect strong support from the senatorial crowd and the followers of James M. Cox, whom Taggart helped materially in San Francisco four years ago.

SAVANNAH METHODISTS OPPOSE UNIFICATION

Guyton, Ga., June 25.—The Savannah district conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, yesterday adopted a resolution opposing unification of the northern and southern Methodist churches.

Vigorous debate, which lasted for an hour, followed the introduction of the resolution by Rev. B. E. Whittington, pastor of Grace church, Savannah. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 34 to 24, more than half of the delegates failing to vote.

UNDERWOOD MANAGER TICKLED BY RECEPTION

New York, June 25.—Supporters of Oscar Underwood, of Alabama, for the democratic presidential nomination were bubbling with excitement tonight over the reception accorded to the senator's blunt denunciation of the Ku Klux Klan today by the convention itself.

The temper of the convention, as shown in the wild tumult which greeted Forney Johnston's naming of the klan in reciting the Underwood platform proposal, was hailed by the Underwood leaders as evidence that their candidate was in a strategic position which promised well for his candidacy should McAdoo and Smith fail to achieve the necessary two-thirds majority to nominate.

The Underwood men had marked particularly the friendly applause from New York's big delegation, which joined with the noise of the Alabama group when Johnston finally got a chance to name his man. They were not in the least disheartened by the day's results. On the contrary, they trotted out the senator again tonight at hotel headquarters for a handshaking ordeal and the corridors were filled with cries of "Let's shake hands with the next president," as the milling crowds pushed their way into the hot, crowded rooms where he held forth.

No specific claims of gains were advanced, but former Representative C. C. Carlin, of Virginia, who is directing the Underwood forces, grinned from ear to ear as he watched the progress of the reception at headquarters.

BURGLAR ENTERS TWO APARTMENTS; GETS VALUABLES

Police are searching for an unidentified white man who early Wednesday night looted two apartments in the apartment house at 49 Washington street and store clothing, jewelry and money valued at several hundred dollars, belonging to J. H. Coleman and Mrs. E. A. Bowie.

The man was seen leaving the apartment house by neighbors who immediately notified police. A thorough search of the neighborhood failed to reveal any trace of the burglar.

Clothing, jewelry and a small amount of money were taken from Miss Bowie's apartment, while clothing and jewelry were stolen from Coleman's room.

AGED LIFE-TERMER TWICE AT LIBERTY, AGAIN IN TOILS

According to information received Wednesday at the office of the state prison commission, B. D. Tolbert, aged 76, under a life sentence for murder, has again been captured after his second escape from confinement. Tolbert, it is stated, was captured on his farm in Haralson county, where he was caught following his previous escape.

Tolbert was sentenced in 1906 and escaped after serving less than one year. He was at liberty for eight years and when recaptured, was assigned for the rest of his term to serve as a servant at the Old Soldiers' home in Atlanta. From there he escaped again four years ago and has just been recaptured.

3 PERSONS HURT IN AUTO CRASHES

Clayton Curry, negro, was probably fatally injured, and E. G. Philpot, of 176 Lucile avenue, and Mrs. E. Surmani, of 674 South Pryor street, slightly hurt in automobile accidents recorded Wednesday.

Philpot and Curry were injured in a triple collision early Wednesday night on Marietta street near Walton street. According to the report of Call Officers Brown and Stone, Philpot, assisted by the negro, was changing a tire on his automobile, which was parked in front of 183 Marietta street.

A car driven by T. H. McCalla, 19, of 365 Luckie street, going east in Marietta street, was forced to turn sharply to the right to avoid colliding with a heavy truck going in the opposite direction, McCalla's machine crashing into the car owned by Miss Margaret Floyd, employed by the Capital City Tobacco company, which was parked near the curb. The impact of the collision drove Miss Floyd's machine into the car on which Philpot and Curry were working, knocking both men to the ground.

Both were taken to Grady hospital where examination showed that Philpot's injuries are not serious, while Curry suffered several bruises and cuts, which, with internal injuries, probably will prove fatal, physicians state.

McCalla was arrested on a charge of reckless driving and was placed under $500 bond.

Driver Is Held.

Mrs. Surmani was crossing Pryor street, near Alice street, when knocked down by the jitney bus driven by L. P. McClung, of Decatur, who took her to Grady hospital. Her injuries were dressed and she was able to be carried to her home. McClung was arrested by Call Officers Goode and Kinard and a charge of reckless driving was docketed against him.

In the other accident, a machine driven by W. J. Fields, of 43 South Mason avenue, was practically demolished when Fields drove across the sidewalk and crashed into a brick wall to avoid a collision with a machine driven by Frank Sable, of 389 Woodward avenue, witnesses stated. Both Fields and Sable were arrested on charges of reckless driving.

Fields, according to the police report, was driving west on Decatur street directly behind Sable's car at the time of the accident. He started to pass Sable's machine but the latter turned to the left to enter Fort street, and, attempting to avoid the collision, Fields also turned to the left, the car mounting the curb and smashing into the wall before he could stop.

Records of the Atlanta safety council, made public Wednesday, show results of the police war on traffic violators during the month of June, when only three persons lost their lives in traffic accidents, one less than during May. A total of 46 have been injured in mishaps this month, in comparison to 103 hurt in May.

Constitution Praised.

This marked decrease in death and injuries during May, members of the council state, is due in a large measure to the unceasing and wide-spread publicity given traffic violators by The Constitution.

Twenty drivers, fined in recorder's court during the day, paid fines aggregating $315, while 12 cases were dismissed. Nine fines were assessed on charges of speeding, nine for violating traffic ordinances, one for violating the dimmer ordinance and one for reckless driving.

A total of 37 new cases were made by police Wednesday, 13 drivers being charged with violating traffic ordinances, nine with speeding, nine with reckless driving, four for violating the dimmer ordinance, and two for insufficient licenses.

New York, June 25.—Maintaining an attitude of utmost confidence but meanwhile spurring their workers on to renewed efforts to bring additional strength to the standards wherever it might be found in state delegations, campaign leaders for Governor Alfred E. Smith, candidate for the democratic presidential nomination, waited tonight for their opportunity to impress the convention assembly tomorrow. Franknil D. Roosevelt, manager of the Smith campaign, was prepared to address the convention and formally place the governor in nomination.

Profably the outstanding developments of the day was the meeting between Governor Smith and Thomas Taggart, the Indiana democratic leader. Mr. Smith has repeatedly expressed the wish to meet Mr. Taggart to discuss his candidacy and political topics of mutual interest with him, but after the conference both principals were noncommittal as to the outcome.

It was an open secret, however, that the Smith managers expect to sway the convention during tomorrow's session in a way that will exceed in quantity both the time and tumult of the demonstration which marked the nominating speech delivered today by former Senator James D. Phelan, of California, for William G. McAdoo, the present principal competitor of the New York governor for nomination honors.

Say, Kid! You're All Skin and Bone

In the midst of plenty tens of thousands of children are starving.

Not starving for food—mind you—for of that they get plenty—but simply starving for the want of vitamines that their entire being is eagerly craving for.

Let us all be thankful that these vitamines can now be supplied and that right now this vast army of weak, thin, undernourished and underweight boys and girls can with the balmy sunshiny days of spring grow strong, robust and happy.

But pity the poor children—how can they take this nasty, nauseating stuff that invariably upsets their small, delicate stomachs?

Most of them can't and now—thank goodness—none of them have to.

For now Cod Liver Oil comes in tasteless sugar coated tablets, that are as easy for the kids to take as candy and they sure do build up the youngsters in double quick time.

So mothers, if any of your loved ones aren't feeling right just ask Jacobs' Pharmacy Co. or any druggist for a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets—60 tablets—60 cents.

They start to help the poor child in just a few days and they'll help you too; for you won't need to worry any more.

One sickly, thin child aged 9 gained 12 pounds in seven months and now plays daily with other children.

Splendid for any run down, weak, skinny, nervous man or woman—thousands of boxes are sold daily—but be sure and ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets—the original and genuine.—(adv.)

S.S.S. The World's Best Blood Medicine!

Do you want a clear skin?

If your skin is not fresh, smooth and glowing, or has suffered from an unwise use of cosmetics, here is an easy, inexpensive way to clear it: Spread on a little Resinol Ointment, letting it remain for ten minutes. Then wash off with Resinol Soap and hot water. Finish with a dash of clear, cold water to close the pores. Do this regularly, once a day, and see if it does not quickly soothe and cleanse the pores, lessen the tendency to pimples, and leave the complexion clear, fresh and velvety. Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are sold by all druggists.

Exodus of Negro And Weevil Pest Called Blessing

Athens, Ga., June 25.—(Special.) With "Georgia" as the subject and selling Georgia to Georgians as his special theme, Dr. A. M. Soule, of the State Agricultural college, delivered an address to a group of students Tuesday night at the State Normal school.

Dr. Soule mentioned the exodus of the negro and the advent of the boll weevil as two of the greatest blessings that have come to Georgia in several decades.

"The advantage of the former is that Georgia farmers and Georgians in general have been forced to think and plan more for their own future and welfare," Dr. Soule said. "With the negro as a laborer, little progress was made. When he began to leave in larger numbers, the white men began to think and to develop new possibilities and new industries.

"The coming of the boll weevil led to the diversification of crops, and a more careful cultivation and marketing of the products. Georgia today is not only producing cotton and corn, but large quantities of such products as tobacco, peaches, watermelons and enormous quantities of vegetables for the market. Conditions have led to the building of cotton factories worth millions of dollars, the cheese making industry and hatchery business has thrived."

Dr. Soule seemed enthusiastic over the future progress of the states, but urged Georgians to be "possibilists" rather than pessimists or optimists.

"Georgia is ready to go, and has the opportunity to make her greatest forward step," he declared.

Reed Has Setback.

Kansas City, June 25.—Senator James A. Reed, ill at a local hotel for a week, suffered a setback today. The inflammation which has caused much discomfort, spread to his right hip and he again had a temperature, according to his physician. It was added, however, that while the senator was in pain and uncomfortable, his condition was not considered dangerous.

Brown-Hastings Wedding Is Brilliant Social Event

A brilliantly beautiful social event of Wednesday evening, June 25, at 9 o'clock, was the wedding of Miss Louise Katherine Brown and Donald Madison Hastings, which took place at the First Presbyterian church in Decatur. Dr. S. S. Waltz, of Chicago, an uncle of the groom, performed the ceremony, assisted by Dr. D. P. McGeachy.

C. W. Dieckmann, head of the music department at Agnes Scott, rendered the lovely bridal music. Mrs. Paul Greene was the violinist and Miss Ruth Spence sang. Just before the ceremony, Mr. Dieckmann played "I Love You Truly," and Mrs. Greene rendered "Andante," by Mendelssohn, on the violin, accompanied by Mr. Dieckmann on the organ; after which Miss Spence sang "Beloved, It Is Morn." The bridal party entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, and the recessional was Lohengrin's wedding march. During the ceremony Mrs. Greene played very softly "To a Wild Rose."

The pulpit and the front of the church were banked with palms and cybotium ferns with high, white vases filled with gladioli. Around the foot of the pulpit were white standards tied with white satin ribbon with clusters of light colored gladioli. The sides of the church were draped with beautiful light green foliage, and baskets of gladioli, tied with tri-colored ribbon, were placed at intervals.

The aisles leading to the altar were outlined with high baskets topped with huge baskets of gladioli, and at each pew was a cluster of gladioli, tied with tulle.

Two huge cathedral candelabra on the altar added to the beauty of the decorations.

Bridal Attendants.

First to enter were the four ushers, Milton Daniel, of Griffin; William Freeborn, Scott Candler, H. W. Brown, of Atlanta. They were followed by the bridesmaids and groomsmen, who alternated in entering.

The bridesmaids wore dresses of chiffon in pastel shades over satin slips, and trimmed with cream lace. They were made alike with cream lace set in at the bateau neckline, and two bands of lace set in the skirt, and trimmed with French flowers and ostrich at the waistline. They wore silver slippers and silver leaves as ornaments in their hair. They carried arm shower bouquets tied with wide satin ribbon in shades that matched each bridesmaid's dress. The flowers in each bouquet harmonized with the bridesmaid's gown, Ward roses, Mme. Claudius de Pernet roses, blue sweet peas, stocks and larkspur being used.

Miss Romola Davis and Miss Margaret Burwell entered first, wearing orchid color. The two groomsmen, Miller Alexander and Elbridge Freeborn, followed them. Miss Christine Evans and Miss Elizabeth Blalock came next, wearing sunburst colored chiffon. John Brown and Edgar Blalock were the groomsmen who followed. Miss Fredeva Ogletree and Mrs. Henry Rice entered together, wearing pale green costumes. They were attended by John W. Bennett and Stanley Hastings. Miss Elizabeth Lockhart and Miss Minnie Turner were gowned in rose color. Ware Hutcheson and Clarence Bloodworth entered next. Miss Clotile Spence and Miss Anna Harwell followed, wearing turquoise blue gowns and attended by Ransome Skeen and Charles Youngblood.

Miss Mary Brown, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and wore Chantilly lace over shell pink trimmed in French flowers. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses and delphinium.

The two little flower girls were Miss Virginia West and Miss Sarah Catherine Terrell, who wore dainty shell-pink chiffon frocks fashioned with tiny ruffles and pastel shaded ribbons hanging from their shoulders. They carried French baskets of roses.

Little Clarence Trippe was ring bearer. He wore a white satin suit fashioned in English style, and carried the ring in a white lily tied with white tulle.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Hubert Rutherford Brown. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, William Raymond Hastings.

Beautiful Bride.

The brunette beauty of the bride was enhanced by her exquisite wedding dress of white duchess satin trimmed in chantilly lace. Small pearl beads outlined the lace design and small white satin roses were artistically used in the trimming. The court train was of chiffon and satin embroidered in pearls and attached to the shoulders with pearl ornaments. Her veil was of white tulle falling to the end of the train and fastened to the bride's soft dark hair with orange blossoms arranged in cap effect. The bride's bouquet was of lilies of the valley and orchids in a graceful arm shower arrangement.

Following the ceremony there was

Doctors recommend Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled. They know it brings results because it is ALL bran. And only ALL bran can be 100 per cent effective in relieving constipation.

ALL bran — Kellogg's — sweeps, cleans and purifies the intestine. It acts as nature acts. It makes the intestine function naturally and regularly. If eaten regularly, it will bring permanent relief in the most chronic cases of constipation—is guaranteed to do so or your grocer returns your money.

Eat at least two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. You will like the wonderful Kellogg flavor—so crisp and nut-like—so different from ordinary brans, which are most unpalatable.

Eat Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, with milk or cream. Sprinkle it over other cereals. Cook it with hot cereals. And by all means try it in the recipes given on every package.

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, made in Battle Creek, is served in individual packages by the leading hotels and restaurants. Sold by all grocers.

Fair-Weather Wives

BY MILDRED BARBOUR

A TURN IN EVENTS.

Cora Forester looked enquiringly at Marjorie standing defiantly before her, slim hands clenched, eyes flashing fire.

"What is it? Have I said something to anger you?"

"No. You have made me see the truth. You have made me see myself as Reed, as other people who know, or suspect, must see me. A parasite, a mollusc, a weak, spineless, jellyfish sort of person, without sufficient pride to tell my family to go—to the devil. That's what I am! I've known it all along. I've felt it and been ready to die of shame. But I never heard it put into words before and it's like a lash to a pride that I begun to think was dead."

She flung up her head suddenly.

"It's all over now! I'm going home and tell Mother that he and Dan will have to accept poverty, or find some other means of getting money. I'm through selling my self-respect to buy us all kind of luxuries."

"That means," prompted Mrs. Forester softly, "that you will marry my nephew?"

"Yes—if he still wants me when he knows the truth."

"Oh, he'll want you all right. He's clean off his head about you."

Mrs. Forester rose and went up to Marjorie and took the young face in her cool palms.

"I only pray that he makes you happy," she said slowly, "I'm a little afraid of my instinct now—I could have sworn once that you'd love Reed Hollister and be happy with him. Ah well—"

She went back to the fire.

"Run and break the news to your mother; and if Charlotte gets too cantankerous, phone me and I'll try my soothing hand."

Marjorie ran lightly across the snow-covered lawns that separated Mrs. Forester's house from Soundview. Her heart was beating high with the thought of freedom. After all these intolerable months, she would at last be able to hold up her head again. It wasn't so much the thought that her freedom would make possible her marriage to Tom Grosvenor, as the realization that she would be once and for all relieved of the hateful burden of Hollister's generosity.

She was a little dashed when Hutchins informed her that Mrs. Boice-Nevins was in town and had phoned that she would remain the night with friends at the Ritz—That meant that the inevitable battle would have to be postponed until morning. It was disappointing.

"Mrs. Barclay is in the library," Hutchins added. "She asked that I tell you as soon as you came in."

Marjorie raised surprised brows. There was a dinner at the club that night. By rights, Julie should have been at home dressing at this hour.

"Hello, Julie!" she greeted her sister in the twilight of the library. "Anything the matter with the lights that you're mooning like this in the dusk."

There was a harsh note she had never heard before in Julie's short laugh. When she snapped on the lights, they revealed her sister, standing by the mantel, strikingly gowned, with a flaming bit of color in each cheek, and a queer, bright, unnatural light in her eyes.

"Nothings the matter with the lights, as you see," said Julie. "I was just sitting here reaching a decision," she straightened her shoulders. "Well, I've made it."

"Decisions seems to be running in the family this evening," laughed Marjorie, jerking off her tam and tossing it on the table. "There's a positive epidemic of them. Suppose you tell me yours, and then I'll tell you mine. By rights, Mother ought to know first, but—she made a gesture of invitation and perched on the arm of a chair.

"Norris went under this afternoon," announced Julie abruptly.

"You don't mean—?" gasped Marjorie.

"Wiped out!" supplemented Julie curtly. "Oh, I knew it would happen, but not so soon. He's been dancing on the edge of destruction for months, the fool. If he'd listened to advice—"

She clenched her hands and turned away abruptly.

"Oh, Julie, I'm so sorry!" breathed Marjorie. "So very, very sorry. Poor Norris! Where is he?"

"How should I know?" snapped Julie. "As if I cared, anyway."

Marjorie went to her and slipped her arms about her tenderly.

"You're upset, dear. Come up to my room and lie down and I'll have Hutchins fix you up a bit of brandy."

"Go away!" Julie shook her off rudely. "I don't want you weeping over me. Besides, don't you see, I'm dressed to dine out."

Marjorie's eyes widened incredulously.

"You're not going to the dinner dance, you and Norris?"

Vividly, she recalled the night of her father's failure, when Mrs. Boice-Nevins had marshalled the family together and gone off to a party just to show the world that they weren't beaten.

"Certainly not," Julie answered shortly. "I told you I don't even know where Norris is. We had a scene this afternoon after the market closed. He came home like a whipped cur. I told him just where we stood and he went tearing off somewhere."

Fear gripped Marjorie. She recalled what her father had said about failures who had the courage to blow out their brains. Suppose Norris—She voiced her fear to Julie hesitantly.

"I wish he would," declared Julie with a curt laugh. "It would save me a lot of trouble—For I'm going to divorce."

Child-birth

WHEN the Little One arrives, you can have that moment more free from suffering than you have perhaps imagined. An eminent physician, expert in this science, has shown the way. It was he who first produced the great remedy, "Mother's Friend." Mrs. C. J. Hartman, Scranton, Pa., says:

"With my first two children I had a doctor and a nurse and then they had to use instruments, but with my last two children I used 'Mother's Friend' and had only a nurse; we had no time to get a doctor because I wasn't very sick—only about ten or fifteen minutes." Use "Mother's Friend" as our mothers and grandmothers did. Don't wait, start today, and meanwhile write to Bradfield Regulator Co., BA-75, Atlanta, Ga., for a free illustrated book containing information every expectant mother should have. "Mother's Friend" is sold by all drug stores.

Welcomes Georgians

Mrs. Roberts Everett of New York, formerly Miss Evelyn Clay of Marietta, daughter of the late U. S. Senator Clay. She is a member of the New York reception committee and has been busy welcoming Georgia delegates to the democratic national convention.

WIFE OF CONVICT FORSAKES LUXURY TO BE NEAR HUBBY

Mrs. George Remus, wife of George Remus, "Bootleg King of America," now serving a term at the federal penitentiary here for violation of the national prohibition law, will move to Atlanta to be near her husband, it was learned Wednesday.

Mrs. Remus will sell at public auction the magnificent Cincinnati home of her husband, together with its luxurious furnishings, according to a dispatch received from Cincinnati.

Everything except the house and lot will be sold on July 2, the report states. They will be sold at a later date. The Remus home is said to be one of the most notable show places in Cincinnati, and is described as one of the most lavishly appointed residences in the country.

Realtors To Meet.

B. M. Grant and Ward Wright will be the principal speakers at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Atlanta Real Estate board at 12:30 today at Peacock cafe. They will present constructive ideas straight from the convention meeting in Washington.

Atlanta Chapter U.D.C. Will Give Reception Today

An interesting event of today will be a reception to be given by the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., from 4 to 6 o'clock at the chapter house, 156 Juniper street. John Litel, leading man of the Baldwill Stock company, will give a performance at 5:30 o'clock. Past presidents and officers of the chapter will be in the receiving line, it was announced, and committees on hospitality, sociability, music and decorations will be in charge of the event.

Senator Harris Highly Praised By Labor Head

In a letter to the Atlanta Federation of Trades and read before that body Monday night, President Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, paid a high tribute to the statesmanship of Senator William J. Harris, of Georgia, and called upon members of the central body to give their support to the senior senator in his candidacy for reelection.

The letter was signed by President Gompers, Secretary Frank Morrison and James O'Connor, also an official of the national labor organization. When read to the local federation by Reading Clerk J. A. Miller, the sentiments of the labor chieftain were generously cheered. In addition to the expression of approval and confidence in the loyalty of Senator Harris to the principles of the nation, President Gompers' letter reviewed the record of the Georgia senator during his service in the senate.

Luther Still, of The Constitution composing room, who was unanimously named as the labor candidate for the state legislature, and who is now making his campaign for election to that office, was present at the meeting and made the maiden address of the campaign.

He was given an ovation by the assembled delegates.

"I wish to say in the outset," Mr. Still said, "that although you have sent me into the field as your candidate, I am in no sense a radical, bound by restricted views and ideas, but I shall be the representative of the whole people of this county and state in event I am successful in the election."

It was announced that a decision has been reached to celebrate Labor day in 1924 as usual, with a parade, and the general committee, according to the announcements, will meet for its preliminary session next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Labor temple.

TECH HEAD ASKS FOR EXTRA $40,000 FOR MAINTENANCE

An extra appropriation of $40,000 for the maintenance of the Georgia School of Technology will be asked from the general assembly this year to supplement the appropriation of $122,500 voted last year, it was announced Wednesday.

Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Tech, has declared that a larger maintenance fund is imperative immediately if the 1,904 students attending classes are to be properly provided for. Georgia Tech receives a smaller per capita maintenance appropriation than other branches of the state university system, Dr. Brittain states.

"We should have an equal chance" he avers in his report to the trustees and governor. "Georgia Tech has a national reputation. This hard-won place should not be penalized, as it is, by giving us one-half, or even one-third as much for each student as the amount appropriated to other branches of the university system."

BETTER FACILITIES WANTED AT ELLIJAY

Officials of Owensby and company, of Marietta, Wednesday appeared before the Georgia public service commission, asking for better loading facilities at Ellijay.

The commission also heard a petition of the Dixie Telephone company, of Pineora, asking authority to assess penalty on subscribers delinquent in payment of their service rental bills.

THE FRAT PIN
By Reev Oppleman

He wore his college frat pin
Just southward from his heart,
And vowed that from its resting place
That pin should ne'er depart.
Years that passed still found him
Firm and standing pat,
Still wearing his college frat pin
In honor of his frat.

His high resolve took chase,
A soft voice coaxed the frat pin
From its old abiding place.
They're now in a little bungalow
With 'Welcome" on the mat.

"You're one in a thousand," she whispered low,
As she pressed her ruby lips to mine,
And I dreamed of her love and a bungalow,
In a land of perpetual summer time.

Next evening I saw, as I passed her door,
Two forms merged close in the fading light,
While the same sweet words of the night before
Came forth—and I knew she had told me right.

THE GUMPS—I WILL

ward. She brought it up with a jerk. A broken muttering from Fane attracted her.

'One might have a more cheerful companion on a shipwreck." That was her last conscious thought.

She awoke with a start. The darkness was thinning out; there were hints of dawn. She arose slightly and looked astern, making out Graydon's figure in the passageway.

"Don!" Her voice fluttered with emotion.

"Don, you didn't keep your promise. You didn't call me. You've been watching all night."

"That's all right. You need your sleep. I don't."

He gestured, but her voice rose sharply.

"It's no use, Don; I want to talk; I have to. Can we stand this a week?"

"The boat can't, I don't think. By morning we'll have to be bailing."

"I see." She placed a hand upon his arm. "One gets new values of life in a time like this, I think—the real values; things—things that seemed of no account become the only things worth while."

"That's easy to explain; it's because you think you won't live long."

"I don't know whether it's that or not. I do know now, the spirit in which some of you—you anyway—came home from the war. Facing death, you came to know what life is, or should be. You brought the ideal home with you—and were disillusioned."

"So will you be if we get out of this."

"How do you know I have any ideals? I haven't said so. All I have thought—I mean what I have come to know tonight—is that these letters I have in my pocket, the letters to you, represent—"

He interrupted her.

"Muriel," he said, "if things were worse than they are, I wouldn't listen to what you want to say. If this boat were breaking to pieces now and we were going down, your arms around me, I wouldn't let you—"

"Why wouldn't you?"

"Because I know all about the values of life you speak of. Cheer up. Think and you can go back to the—how'd you describe it?—the gorgeous whirl."

"Don—"

Her reply was broken by a nightmare cry from the sleeper in the cockpit, a drawn-out, quavering ululation dreadful to hear from a man. For a moment there was no sound save the whine of the wind and the swish of the hurrying waves.

Her arms went out, catching Graydon about the neck.

"Just a minute, Don. I have to. There, thank you. It—it wasn't anything. I had to—to touch something—something—well, big."

He couldn't see her smile as her head sank upon her arm.

It was clear in the morning, but the loneliness of the day was hardly less oppressive than the night had been. And the sea was still running wild; and, as Graydon feared, some seams in the boat had begun to start. Fane, seasick and broken-spirited, was set to bailing, while Graydon's attention was fully occupied in handling the boat so that she would meet and ride the seas.

Muriel sat with eyes sweeping the horizon straining over the waters for signs of ship or sail. No one talked. Sometimes the three would find themselves crowded in the rear cockpit, as though responding to the animal instinct for association. Occasionally one or the other would go through the passgeway to the forward cockpit, remaining there until thought became intolerable.

Late in the afternoon there came a cry from Graydon. Following his outstretched hand, the man and the girl saw floating upon the waves a tin case destined to pass the seaplane some fifty feet away.

"Gasoline! God!" Graydon shook his hand at Fane. "Can you swim, Fane? Go overboard and get that can. It'll take us ashore."

"Overboard! You fool! A man wouldn't live three minutes in that sea."

It was the longest sentence he had spoken since the plane lighted upon the waves. Graydon's voice rose angrily.

"You'll have to take the chance. You can't manage this boat. She'd go to pieces. Quick, now—or I'll throw you over."

"Eh!" Fane shivered. Then words came from him in an angry wail like a child's—except that there were curses.

"I can't. I tell you. I can't swim well even in smooth water. I won't go."

Muriel eyed him curiously. This was the man who had impressed her, who had impressed all women. How strangely life worked out—sometimes!

"I'd go myself," she said, "if—"

"Arthur," she said, "I've been thinking of that crowd on the terrace last night. How many millions of years ago was it we had that sort of life?"

Fane shook his head and did not reply.

For the first time in his careless, idle, velvet-lined life he was face to face with reality. It was more than he could comprehend. He was dazed.

Darkness began to fall. Graydon came into the cockpit with a box of cartridges and a heavy pistol in his hand.

"There are two dozen of these cartridges," he said. "We'll eat, then divide the night up into watches of two hours each. Fire a cartridge every half-hour. We'll have to be on our honor not to sleep during watch. It may mean life or death."

"I'll watch all night," said Muriel. "I couldn't possibly sleep. You two sleep."

"You'll sleep, all right. "I'll take from nine to eleven, then Fane, then you—"

"God!" Fane stretched himself as though trying to awaken from a dream. "This is rotten. I'm cold."

Muriel looked at him, marveling that he could be the same man. To her he suggested a piece of colorful cloth upon which the rain had beaten, washing out the bright hues. Almost everything that had gone to make up his personality had vanished. He had enough manly residuum to hold himself from collapse, but that was all; he suggested nothing so much as a human automaton.

Don tossed him a sweater.

"Put this on," he said. "Glad you had that polo coat, Muriel. Is it warm enough?"

"Quite, thank you."

The dark came. Muriel saw Graydon rise in the cockpit and extend an arm aloft. There came a report, and a glowing star, dripping luminous fragments, sought the viewless skies and thne turned toward the sea in a graceful curve.

Thunder began to reverbrate over the waters; an occasional shaft of lightning quavered across the clouds. Graydon, crouched in the passageway between the two cockpits, took the first watch. Muriel was in the after cockpit seat; Fane, at her side, had fallen into a drowse almost as soon as darkness fell. He moved uneasily from time to time, murmuring repeatedly. Muriel's head fell for-

New York, June 25.—Strength of the July position was the chief feature in today's cotton market. Demand for notices representing about 15,000 bales made contracts scarce after a few early offerings had been absorbed. As a result, shorts sent the price up from 28.05 to 29.15 and July closed at 29.13, or 83 points net higher. Later months were pulled up by the July strength, except August, which closed 11 points net lower. October and other new-crop months showed net gains of 8 to 16 points. The final tone of the market was steady.

The market opened easy at a decline of 14 to 20 points in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables and favorable weather reports. October sold off to 25.08 with the general market showing net losses of 25 to 30 points early but soon turned firmer on reports that leading trade interests were stopping the July notices. New-crop months sold 17 to 21 points net higher, with October selling at 25.57 in the late trading.

Two more private crops reports were issued, indication figures ranging from 69 to 70 and indicated yields from 11,258,000 to 11,470,000 bales.

STRENGTH FELT AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, June 25.—The cotton market developed unexpected strength in today's trading owing to active covering by belated shorts in July. After an early decline of 23 points on July and October and 25 on December, owing to good weather and expectation of a favorable weekly weather report, July shot upward carrying with it to a moderate extent the new crop months. The strength in July was due to the eager covering by anxious shorts, who feared that the local stock would be depleted by outward shipments. July advanced from 27.20 to 28.20; October advanced from 24.32 to 24.77, and December from 24.11 to 24.57, a gain of 45 to 46 points. All months eased off moderately in the late trading on realizing, and the close showed net gains for the day of 61 points on July and 8 to 14 points on new crop months.

New York reported notices issued there for 20,000 bales, all the tenders being stopped by one large spot house known to be accumulating cotton for export to Russia. No July notices were issued in the local market. Two more private condition reports were issued during the day, one showing condition of 70 with indicated crop of 11,400,000 bales and the other 69, with yield of 11,285,000 bales.

The weather map and forecast were both favorable.

Stock Letter.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, June 25.—Convention preliminaries seemed to have no effect on the market which at the close appeared to have resumed the upward course which started with the lowering of the federal discount rate. Final tone was strong.

Cotton Letters.

POST & FLAGG.

New York, June 25.—The tender of some 15,000 bales for July delivery although much in excess of general expectation failed to weaken that position and in fact the premium took on fresh strength proving the chief sustaining feature of the market and offsetting completely the continued favorable crop advices with two private crop reports distinctly better than those issued earlier. The later the date to which any report is made up the better it seems likely to be based on recent weather conditions and this is leading to expectation of official figures rather above than below seventy. It looks hardly probable, however, that the figures will reach the 10-year average so that the crop will enter its most critical period in a somewhat enfeebled state.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, June 25.—The scarcity of contracts whenever there is any covering of consequence is good evidence of an oversold condition. We look for more covering before the bureau and a higher range of values.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, June 25.—Local professional sentiment is bearish while cables indicate that the feeling in Liverpool is also bearish on the more favorable weather and with a subsidence of the covering movement in July, it seems probable that the market will ease off somewhat unless the weather turns unfavorable.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, June 25.—The weekly weather report was not quite as favorable as had been anticipated, together with some scattered trade buying of new crops, brought a recovery in the market. It is noticeable that whenever the new crop months get on the basis of 25 cents for October, there is more trade interest shown than has been seen for some time past. Momentarily the market acts oversold, but some further recovery may be expected, especially as the temperatures are again rising in Texas. Liverpool futures are due tomorrow: July, 17.00; October, 14.97.

C. P. ELLIS & CO.

New Orleans, June 25.—Barring the influence of July, the weather will be the controlling factor from now on, and as long as the latter remains as favorable as it is at the present time, we think it will be difficult to sustain any advance.

A. V. CURRAN & CO.

New Orleans, June 25.—There is persistent talk on the floor of shipping cotton out of the New Orleans stock for delivery on July contracts in New York. If true, this would only tend to strengthen the July position in New Orleans, while it would not relieve matters much in New York, as stocks in warehouses there have been very materially depleted. Three prominent Savannah spot houses advise they are receiving cotton from all over Georgia, Alabama and the Carolinas for immediate shipment to Russia.

Total bond sales (par value), $16,416,000.

New York, June 25.—Curious cross-currents in the bond market today held down the average of prices, although a variety of individual issues reached new 1924 high records. Trading activity expanded after an initial period of dullness.

Although price changes were relatively narrow, a widening inquiry for speculative railroad issues enlivened trading in that section of the list. Growth of the consolidation movement among the railroads furnished the buying power in several cases and contributed to substantial improvement in New Haven, Katy, Denver & Rio Grande, Missouri Pacific and International Great Northern lines. Erie bonds were subjected to profit-taking.

A strong underlying demand for the high grade rail mortgages also was in evidence. New York Central 6's jumped 1 3-8 points to a 1924 top price at 107 3-8. Gains of a point or so were recorded by Pennsylvania, Southern railway and Hudson and Manhattan issues. Investment buying carried U. S. Steel 5's to the year's highest level, at 105.

The Atlantic Refining company completed negotiations with bankers for the sale of $15,000,000 2 to 4-year notes, which are understood to bear interest of 4 1-2 or 5 per cent. Public offerings is expected shortly.

DAILY STOCK FEATURE

Over Fenner & Beane's Private Leased Wire.

SUPERIOR OIL CORPORATION is said now to be in a stronger financial position today than when it received the proceeds of the million-dollar bond issue early this year. Production has since been doubled and cash in bank is materially larger than some months ago. All of the company's production is now being marketed without any reduction in price whatsoever.

MONTGOMERY WARD AND SEARS ROEBUCK have moved upward in the past few weeks as a result of the better selling in agricultural circles. The steady advance in price of farm products has increased the purchasing power of our rural communities, and this probably will be responsible for the board of directors yet placing Sears Roebuck on a dividend paying basis.

MIDDLE STATES OIL CORPORATION: According to President Saklatvala, is not interested in any way in the purchases or acquisition of the $5,384,000 of 7 per cent notes outstanding. These notes were given to the 35 brokers who were interested in the market activity in Southern States oil stock. One report which is now current is to the effect that the brokers who received the 7 per cent notes are planning to convert these securities into cash by offering to exchange them, according to the recently announced plan for Middle States Oil stock. The merit of this plan is quite apparent since the notes have no wide market, while the stock itself can be sold in large quantities since it is listed on the New York Exchange.

Total stock sales, 906,400 shares.

New York, June 25.—Filing of the government's suit against fifty of the leading oil companies inspired heavy selling of the oil shares in today's market by speculators for the decline who apparently attempted to unsettle the general list, but they made little headway and prices eventually moved higher in response to another impressive demonstration of strength by the railroad shares.

Trading was in greater volume, total sales crossing the 900,000 share mark for the first time this week.

Rumors of mergers and increased dividends provided the ground work for another buying movement in the rails, more than a score selling 1 to 2 1-2 points above yesterday's closing prices and a dozen or more attaining new peak prices for the year.

Southern Railway touched 63 5-8, the highest price in its history, while New Haven, Atchison, Northern Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Pere Marquette common and preferred, "Katy" common and preferred, New York, Ontario & Western, Great Northern preferred and St. Louis Southwestern preferred were among those to sell at new peak prices for the year. Marked strength also was displayed by Lackawanna and New York Central, buying of the latter being associated with unconfirmed reports that the annual dividend was likely to be increased from $7 to $8. The attack on the oils sent Standard Oils of California and New Jersey, Houston, Atlantic Refining, Producers and Refiners and Shell Transport down 1 to 1 3-4 points, but all made good recovery later, Atlantic Refining closing at 87 for a net gain of 1 point. United States Steel closed fractionally higher at 94 1-4, while Baldwin and American Can rallied briskly just before the close of what appeared to be active short covering.

Among the specialties Kresge jumped 10 points to a new 1924 high at 390, while Montgomery Ward touched a new top at 29 3-8. Savage Arms also developed marked strength, moving up nearly 3 points to a new high at 57 1-8 on buying attributed to financial interests who are impressed by the potentialities of the company's new electrical devices, which are reported to be netting a large profit. Brooklyn Manhattan Transit issues continued their rise to new high ground under the stimulus of an increase in fare granted to the New York and Queens Traction company.

Other outstanding strong spots included Woolworth, Sears Roebuck, Fleischmann, Cuyamel Fruit, Schulte Stores, General Baking, American Water Works common and 6 per cent preferred, and Loose Wiles Biscuit, all of which closed 2 to 4 points higher. Call money again ruled at 2 per cent. The time money market was dull with no change in rates and borrowers unwilling to pay more than 2 3-4 per cent for the shorter maturities. The bulk of prime commercial paper continued to move at 3 3-4 per cent.

The feature of the foreign exchange market was the establishment of a new high record for the year by Canadian dollars at 99 cents which was attributed to the transfer of funds to Canada for the purchase of Canadian securities because of the cheap maney rates here. Other foreign rates held relatively steady, deman sterling being quoted around $4.32 1-2 and French francs around 5.30 cents.

HEAVY GAINS SEEN IN GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, June 25.—Corn and oats shot skyward in price today, both showing at one time an overnight gain in some cases of more than 5c a bushel. Exceptionally adverse conditions for the corn crop were reported. Corn closed strong 1 1-8c to 4 1-4c net higher, July 93 1-4 to 93 1-2, and September 91 3-4 to 92, with wheat firm at the same as yesterday's finish to 1-2c up, July $1.14 3-4 to $1.14 1-2, and September $1.16 to $1.16 1-8. Oats closed at 1 to 3 1-8 advance. In provisions, the outcome was unchanged to 10c to 12c higher.

Active buying of corn, especially on the part of traders who had contracted to make deliveries in July, sent that month quickly to above 90 cents for the first time this season. Other deliveries were prompt also in breaking the season's high price record, the weather forecast pointing to more rain, although the crop had already been deluged and the majority of fields were reported to be far behind the stage of development usual at this time of the year. Scarcity of receipts here gave further impetus to the upward swing of the market. Only 23 cars of corn arrived in Chicago today.

Announcement that one of the most widely known crop authorities in the country had described the present outlook for corn as desperate, without parallel in the experience of a great many years, had much to do with stimulating the increased demand from buyers. Word that some Argentine corn had been bought to come to New Orleans. New York and Montreal failed to check the ascent of values and a purchase at $1 a bushel for No. 2 white corn was noted at St. Louis.

Oats shared in the activity and strength of corn, all deliveries of oats reaching new high records for the season.

Wheat was relatively quiet and was steadied by corn strength.

Provisions reflected firmness of hog values and of grain.

Grain Letter.

FENNER & BEANE.

Chicago, June 25.—WHEAT: There was only a moderate trade with the outside interest disappointing. Houses with foreign connections and exporters took the early offerings and the market firmed up later with corn but there was no snap to the demand. Cash basis very strong, with millers in the market for choice dark hard. Weather and crop conditions about unchanged and reports stressed the late spring and possibilities of black rust damage later.

CORN: There was general buying and the market ran into extensive stop loss buying. Trade was highly excited by reports on crop losses and continued wet cool weather. Local expert said the present outlook was the worst ever known. The conditions responsible for the advance are still with us and it will take actual receipts to afford any relief.

OATS: Trade much broader and market strong with covering by July shorts and buying of later futures by commission houses. July made new high on crop with cash premiums well maintained and the leading bulls confident of their position and many in the trade predicting 60 cents for oats.

PROVISIONS: New investment buying gave market strong tone. The buying centered in October lard. Packers sold on upturns. Hogs steady to 5 cents up; top, 7.15.

Wall Street Not Disturbed Over Oil Suit, Says Burnum

Strength was shown in the stock market during the early trading today, especially by the so-called Van Sweringen shares, but the renewed upward price movement was halted by the unexpected announcement that the government had brought suit in the United States court at Chicago against Standard Oil of Indiana, Standard of California, Standard of New York, Standard of New Jersey and other oil companies under the Sherman act, charging a combination in restraint of trade in manipulation of gasoline and other oil prices. Standard Oil shares sold off about a point.

Recalling what happened after the government won its other suit against Standard Oil under the Sherman act, Wall street was not greatly disturbed over today's news.

Motors sold off some with the oil shares. Steel common was strong but Bethlehem was again weak. Falcon Steel passed its quarterly dividend of $1 today. For the 3,600 quarters an extra of 1 1-4 per cent had been declared. It is no secret here that the independents are having a bad quarter and will probably without exception fail to declare dividends earned.

Morning papers here carried a story to the effect that Erie will form one of the links in a 13,000-mile system which will include Nickel Plate, Chesapeake and Ohio, Pere Marquette and some others, the new system to be a competitor of the New York Central, Pennsylvania and B. & O.

George F. Baker, more than a year ago, realizing that actual control of Erie was kicking about Wall street in the floating supply of the stock which was being quoted at only a few cents on the dollar, began to buy more Erie stock and kept it up until he was by far the largest stockholder. Then Baker put a personal representative in the Erie management and began to work out his plans for the development of the property.

"The Charity Ball."

(At the Atlanta.)

"The Charity Ball," David Belasco's famous society drama which won such wide and instant favor in America a few years ago, was never more admirably done than by the Baldwin Players at the Atlanta theater this week. John Litel and Romaine Callendar are supreme in their roles as brothers, filled with love for each other but divided by differences in the lives they led.

"Connie Goes Home."

(At the Lyric.)

It is hard to believe that the withered old crone of "Madame X" and the romping child of "Connie Goes Home" could be played by one and the same little actress. True it is, however, that Miss Isabelle Lowe is as convincing as "Connie" this week as she was as "Jacqueline" a few weeks ago.

The sharp contrast in the central characters applies to the entire play. "Connie Goes Home" is as merry a comedy as a tired playgoer could ask as relief from summer tedium. It may be seen any night this week and matinee today and Saturday.

"Janet of France."

(At Loew's Grand.)

"Janet of France," international comedienne, is scoring a big success at Loew's Grand theater this week, this attractive little Parisian presenting one of her greatest numbers, "A Little Touch of Paris." Frank Terry, actor, screen star and author, goes over big with his famous masterpiece, "Mr. Booze," and in addition gives other clever stories and songs. Comedy, songs and dances and Al Koko and his famous bounding contest round out the vaudeville offering. Colleen Moore is the star in the picture, "Through the Dark."

Hodges' Musical Comedy.

(At the Forsyth.)

Ollie Hodges, director of the Jimmie Hodges Musical comedy company, deserves a lot of praise for the way he is putting on the famous musical comedy succes, "The Gingham Girl," this week's offering, and he is getting it, too, in the manner in which every audience is receiving the play.

The precision with which every detail is carried out is testimony enough of the perfection of Director Hodges' direction.

(At the Howard.)

If it's action you're looking for, here it is—plus—in the Paramount picture, "Code of the Sea," playing at the Howard theater all this week. Rod LaRocque and Jacqueline Logan are featured in the principal roles of the production, directed by Victor Fleming. There's not a moment during the running of the picture when you're not sitting on the edge of your seat, open-mouthed, wondering just when a big wave is coming down upon La Rocque in his small boat and send him hurtling into the sea, or when you're not trying to decide just when this same player is going to "snap out of it" and show these "clever" seamen a thing or two.

'Hunchback of Notre Dame'

(At the Metropolitan.)

During the filming of the Universal production, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," each player was requested to fill out a sheet giving a history of their life and theatrical experience. One question was on the player's most exciting experience. Patsy Ruth Miller, the Esmeralda of the production, answered by saying, "Trying to make the dumb goat in this picture act like an actor and a gentleman." "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" will be seen at the Metropolitan theater all this week.

"The Guilty One."

(At the Rialto.)

There are any number of interesting features to the program which is being presented at the Rialto theater this week. First and foremost there is Agnes Ayres in that tremendous mystery, "The Guilty One." Then there is an installment of the 'Leather Pushers" and a fine musical program by Whitney Hubner's Rialto orchestra.

CHIROPODISTS SEEK STATE RECOGNITION

A bill designed to license pediatrists, commonly known as chiropodists, and to protect the public against imposters, will be introduced at this session of the Georgia legislature, backed by the Georgia Association of Chiropodists, it was announced Wednesday by Dr. C. T. Dowling, secretary and treasurer of the association.

Dr. Dowling stated that the general public is now under the erroneous belief that the chiropodist is licensed and holds a state certificate. The bill was passed, he states, by the senate last year and it is confidently expected that the lower house will make it the law of the state during the present session.

LAST SERVICES HELD FOR MRS. D. H. HICKY

Final tribute was paid Mrs. Daniel H. Hickey, well known Atlanta woman who died Monday at the residence here, in funeral services held Tuesday afternoon at Social Circle, Ga.

Mrs. Hicky was known throughout the state, and was a daughter of Col. and Mrs. Joseph Whitehead, of Walton county. She moved to Atlanta after residing in Knoxville, Tenn., and Gainesville, Ga., and was active in civic and church circles here.

Because carrying charges on kerosene almost prohibit its use among the people of interior Africa, oil drawn from the shea-butter tree is employed as fuel and light by many of the natives.

FIGHT PROMOTERS TO HEAR DECISION SOME TIME TODAY

Decision by Judge E. D. Thomas, in Fulton superior court, in the case of E. E. Nelson against Holt J. Gewinner, W. L. Stribling, Sr., Robert Troy, Richmond Paul, Bill Holmes and Chess Logomarsino on suit to enjoin receipts of the Stribling-O'Dowd boxing match is expected Thursday.

Nelson filed a bill to enjoin the defendants, setting up that he was "frozen out" of the receipts from the fight, claiming half the proceeds. He was formerly an official of the Southern Athletic association. He secured an order temporarily enjoining defendants from disposing of any of the money.

Nelson further alleges he was forced out of the association which he helped organize to promote Stribling's bouts. Other defendants were partners in the association, he alleges, and sought to prevent him from participating in the receipts.

ATLANTA CHILDREN GUESTS AT BIG CIRCUS

Scores of children from three Atlanta institutions were made happy Wednesday afternoon at the matinee of MacMahon Brothers' big police relief circus, to which the little tots were invited as the guests of the management. Invitations were sent to the Atlanta Child's Home, the Home for the Friendless and to the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children, and a large number of inmates from each of the institutions attended in a body.

Prior to the matinee Harry Le Pearl and his troupe of clowns went to Scottish Rite hospital, where they staged a special entertainment for crippled inmates who were unable to attend the circus. Despite their ailments the laughter of the children was spontaneous and genuine and the visit of the clowns left them something to talk about for many days.

Not one of the several hundred kiddies who attended failed to enjoy to the fullest extent, if their screams of laughter are to be taken as indications, and without exception they went away with their little faces beaming happy smiles.

The growing popularity of the big indoor circus was attested Wednesday by the greatly increased attendance, records for both Monday and Tuesday having been broken. While the attendance at night was by far the largest, that of the afternoon performance was considerably larger than that at Tuesday's matinee.

With the exception of the local entries in the diving contests there is not a single amateur performer on the entire bill, according to Captain A. J. Holcombe, secretary-treasurer of the Atlanta Police Relief association, under whose auspices the circus is being staged.

Many who have attended the show have voiced their approval of the change from hot tents to the indoors of a comfortable, cool and well ventilated building.

It was stated Wednesday afternoon that children from other institutions for children will be guests of the management this afternoon. Officials predict that Thursday night's performance would be played to a packed house.

RELIEF FROM HEAT IN FORM OF RAIN PREDICTED TODAY

"In thy blazing rays, Oh, Sun,
"Until what was a rare June day
"Was done, well done."

Warbling that lightsome refrain to the tune of "There'll Be a Hot Time In the Old Town Tonight," C. F. von Herrmann, chief of the local office of the United States weather bureau, late Wednesday afternoon slammed down his desk, emptied the last barrel of perspiration and called it a day.

Believing the public not to be interested in the official's personal opinions this reporter will not reveal what kind of a day he called it, but will state only his official views.

The day was not so warm that it might not have been warmer. At 4 o'clock the thermometer carried its peak load of 92 degrees fireandhot, one degree lower than the record for the season.

The night was cooled by a refreshing shower that fell in the city and assumed downpour proportions in northside suburbs, and which was accompanied b ya brilliant electrical display.

Additional relief from the eight days' heat wave may possibly come in the form of thundershowers this afternoon. No money-back guarantee goes with that. Otherwise the weather will remain unchanged.

Relief from the eight days' heat wave may possibly come in the form of thundershowers this afternoon. No money-back guarantee goes with that. Otherwise the weather will remain unchanged.

A sidelight was thrown on the heat wave in an announcement Wednesday by W. Zode Smith, general manager of waterworks, that an average of 30,000,000 gallons of water had been consumed each day for the last week by Atlanta and adjacent territory served by the city system. The plant is capable of providing even more than that, if necessary, he said.

BURGLARS REAP UNUSUAL HARVEST IN SEVERAL "JOBS"

A rich harvest was reaped by burglars operating in residential sections between the hours of 10 o'clock Tuesday night and daybreak Wednesday morning, according to reports to detectives Wednesday.

Seven new refrigerators were removed from an apartment building near completion at 697 North Boulevard. A motor truck was used, according to the theory of the police, and the "job" was done by at least four men.

Clothing, jewelry and money approximating more than $200 was taken from the home of Winship Nunnally, on Pace's Ferry road. So quietly did the thief work that Mr. Nunnally was not awakened when his bedroom was ransacked.

Mrs. W. W. Meyers, 751 Highland avenue, reported the loss of $200 in cash to burglars.

MISS ALIDA HILEY, 58, DIES AT FORT VALLEY

OIL SUIT BRINGS LOSSES IN CURB

New York, June 25.—Sharp recessions in the oil shares following heavy selling inspired by the government's anti-trust suit against the leading oil companies of the country, and a remarkable 7-point gain in Grand 5-10-25-cent stores following the five-point jump of yesterday, were outstanding features in today's curb market.

South Penn Oil broke 11 points to 117 and then rallied to 120 while net losses of 2 to 3 points were registered by Prairie Oil and Gas, Ohio Oil, Standard Oils of Kansas and Ohio and Vacuum. New Mexico Land was one of the few shares in this group to move against the current trend, crossing 8 on buying based on the making of a contract for the geological examination of the company's land by the Texas and Pacific Coal and Oil company.

Lehigh Valley Coal certificates again were active, more than 20,000 changing hands. The closing price of 35 5-8 represented a net loss of 1-4. Radio stocks held firm and public utilities showed mixed changes. Fresh weakness developed in Durant Motors, which fell below 14 for a net loss of 3-4.

Bonds were active and firm.

SUDDEN STORM SOAKS NEW YORK

New York, June 25.—Swooshing through this gaily-decorated city at a 72-mile-an-hour clip, a 20-minute summer cloudburst ripped festooned convention flags, draperies and welcoming signs from street poles and public buildings.

Three persons were drowned, a seaplane was spatted down onto the surface of the lower bay and wrecked, two street cars were struck by lightning and countless thousands were marooned when a rush of water invaded portions of the subway in Brooklyn.

The storm broke sharply after 5 o'clock in the afternoon after a premature nightfall had warned of its coming. Within less than half an hour more than an inch of rain had fallen over New York and the immediate vicinity.

Streets Were Torrents.

Surface cars were stalled where the water, rising in the streets faster than the sewers could carry it away, cut off the power. In the outlying sections of the city, trees were blown down and low-lying portions of the terrain flooded.

Men and women disembarked from conveyances of all descriptions in some sections and hoisting skirts or trousers to the knee, plunged into the torrents in the streets.

A ferry boat for Staten Island from the Battery was midway in its journey when the flaying wind broke forth. Glass panels throughout the boat were smashed in by the force of the gale and the rain sluiced through every opening.

One Girl Drowns.

The wrecked seaplane was a police machine and both occupants were rescued after they had clung to the craft until shore currents brought them to the beach.

About 15 persons who were passengers in the lighting-stricken tram cars were taken to a hospital.

Pounding surf prevented the launching of a surf boat to aid Jeanette Fills, 23, and Kurt Lindheimer, 26, when the canoe in which they were paddling was capsized in the first windy blast. Miss Fills was drowned when a wave banged the overturned canoe against the struggling pair, loosening Lindheimer's grasp on the frightened girl.

ABROGATING UNIT RULE MAY COST IOWA TO M'ADOO

New York, June 25.—Abrogation of the unit rule was decided upon today by the Iowa delegation of 26 members to the democratic national convention and the decision was declared by some members to mean that the McAdoo forces had lost control of the delegation.

The delegation decided, however, to vote for McAdoo on the first two ballots and after that scatter its strength among Smith, Underwood, Davis and others.

A fight had existed in the Iowa delegation ever since it arrived here, the clash being between a majority group favoring McAdoo, led by E. T. Meredith, former secretary of agriculture, and a Smith and anti-McAdoo group led by Wilbur W. Marsh, former democratic treasurer, but not a delegate.

FLAGG ARRESTED ON HONEYMOON AS CHECK ARTIST

New York June 25.—James Montgomery Flagg, the artist, who is now on a honeymoon trip to the Pacific coast by automobile, has telegraphed to the New York Times an account of how he was detained by Sheriff Zook, of Larned, Kan., because he answered the description of a man who had passed a worthless check.

Mrs. Flagg was Miss Dorothy Virginia Wadman, who had posed as a model for many of Mr. Flagg's magazine cover illustrations. They were married here on May 10.

Mr. Flagg's telegram follows:

"I was held by Sheriff Zook, of Larned, Kan., because I answered description of man who uttered worthless check at Great Bend evening before. I was mortified because he had never heard of me, but Zook looked exactly like Irv Cobb, which I told him, and was mortified by his entire ignorance of the Pride of Paducah. Had a letter in pocket from Bill Hart. Sheriff grudgingly admitted having heard of him. Zook telephoned Great Bend, but found out I was about four or five inches too tall, so he let me go and we parted with handclasp of perfect amity. This is not idle yarn, but gospel. Driving on to Los Angeles."

CASE AGAINST JAP WILL BE CALLED IN COURT TODAY

Trial of George Lee, a Japanese whose real name is said to be Gongali Nowafhima, on a charge of larceny from the house in the alleged theft of $2,700 worth of merchandise from Atlanta department stores, is expected to begin in Judge J. D. Humphries' division of the superior court today.

Lee was indicted jointly with Louis Clarke and his wife, Mrs. Margaret Clarke. The Clarkes were convicted last week and drew sentences of seven to ten and three to ten years, respectively.

Solicitor General John A. Boykin has procured a criminal record of Lee from the bureau of criminal identification in Washington, D. C., which will be sought to be used in the trial, it was announced at his office.

TO HOLD FUNERAL SERVICES TODAY FOR MRS. A. SHAW

Funeral services for Mrs. Augustus Shaw, well known Atlanta woman who died Tuesday at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Rix Stafford, of 26 Peachtree Place, will be held at 10 o'clock this morning from the home of a daughter, Mrs. Donald Loyless, 10 East Fourteenth street. Interment will be in West View, with H. M. Patterson & Son in charge.

Mrs. Shaw, who was 76 years old, had been ill since a fall two years ago in which she suffered a fractured hip. She was a native Georgian, having been born in Floyd county. For many years she resided in Richmond, where her husband was a prominent railway official, moving to Atlanta from that city. She was widely known and beloved.

2 DEAD, 23 HOMELESS IN CAROLINA STORM

Two persons were killed, 32 negroes were made homeless, six other homes were damaged and crops were laid waste by a tornado that struck Lee county, South Carolina, Monday night, according to a telegram received by southern division headquarters of the Red Cross here Wednesday from a relief worker at Bishopville, S. C. Aid is being extended to the sufferers, it was stated.

Cape Cod was so named by Bartholomew Gosnold, because he caught many codfish there.

SEEK TO ENJOIN OIL 'CONSPIRACY'

Washington, June 25.—Fifty or more of the principal oil companies of the United States were attacked in anti-trust proceedings instituted by the government today in the federal court at Chicago.

Attorney General Stone asked an injunction to restrain the companies from further violations of the Sherman act, which he charged against them.

The complaint charged "a combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce among the several states and with foreign nations in gasoline, kerosene and other hydrocarbon products," or, generally, all petroleum derivatives.

Oil patent contracts of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, cited by Attorney General Stone in his complaint, are legal and honest, have been in effect for ten years and never before have been attacked, Colonel R. W. Stewart, chairman of the board of directors of the Indiana company, said tonight in a formal statement commenting on the government's charges. He offered to present every contract to which his company is a party to the courts for adjudication as to their propriety and equity.

Colonel Stewart's statement says that "from the bill itself we gather that the only desire of the government is to expunge certain provisions of a definite character" from the contracts, and adds "we are glad to submit this issue to the courts and await the decision in this case with a full conviction that they will be held proper and just in every respect."

Nearly all of the important companies, including all of the Standard companies, were cited. The attorney general charged them with having combined to control the production of gasoline by a pooling of asserted patent rights in violation of the anti-trust act, naming as the primary defendants the Standard Oil companies of Indiana and New Jersey and the Standard Development company, the Texas company and the Gasoline Products company.

Sweeping Action.

The action constituted one of the most sweeping anti-trust moves on the part of the government in many years. Besides the principals the attorney general named as parties a number of "secondary defendants" whom he charged were in the combination as a result of accepting licenses from one or more of the primary defendants.

In substance the complaint set forth, that due to the increased demand for gasoline resulting from the great increase in automobiles, manufacturers of gasoline now utilize processes for "cracking" gasoline which increases the yield from a given amount of stock by 50 to 100 per cent over old methods of distillation. Although disclosures of this process were made in patents issued 60 years ago and long since expired, it continued, the primary defendants have pooled a number of patents covering unimportant improvements and "are seeking to extort huge sums from the manufacturers of gasoline in the guise of royalties and by means of certain restrictive covenants contained in license agreements."

Secondary Defendants.

Those named as "secondary defendants" were the Standard companies of Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, New York and Ohio, and the Aetna Refining company, the American Refining company, the Beacon Oil company, the Clayton Oil & Refining Co., Charles F. de Ganahl, Galena Signal Oil company of Texas, Globe Oil & Refining Co., Graysburg Oil company, Hickock Producing company, Humble Oil & Refining Co., the Imperial company, Ltd., Indian Refining company, Industrial Refining company, Indiahoma Refining company, Interstate Refineries, Elliott Jones & Co., Lion Oil & Refining Co., Magnolia Petroleum company, Miller Petroleum company, Omaha Refining corporation, Owl Oil company, Petroleum Refining company, Producers Pipe Line & Refining Co., Pure Oil company, Root Refineries, Roxana Petroleum corporation, Sapulpa Refining company, Southern Oil corporation, Sun company, Tidal Refining company, Tidewater Oil company, United States Oil & Refining Co., Utah Oil Refining company, Vacuum Oil company, Waite Phillips company, Waverly Oil Works company, the White Eagle Oil & Refining company, Standard Oil company of California, Skelly Oil company and the Solar Refining company.

Seventy-nine license agreements were set up by the government as constituting and evidencing the "combination, conspiracy and monopoly." These agreements contained, the complaint argued, numerous provisions affecting "adversely the production, transportation and sale" of gasoline and other petroleum derivatives in interstate and foreign commerce.

Pooling of Patents.

The attorney general continued that the effect of the agreements had been to pool a large number of patents and alleged patent rights relating to minor improvements in "a long practiced art." He charged further that the agreements tend "to estop all parties to the plan, both primary and secondary, from in any manner contesting the validity of the asserted patent rights; to burden interstate and foreign trade and commerce in petroleum derivatives by levying thereon heavy charges in the guise of royalties."

Charges that the companies also attempted perpetuation of the plan beyond the life of any of their existing patents by providing for the pooling of after-acquired patents also were contained in the complaint which set forth that the defendants sought to restrain many of the licences in the amount of gasoline they might produce by fixing a limitation on production or by imposing a graduated scale of royalties which penalized production over a certain amount and made this over-production unprofitable.

The companies involved were directly charged with seeking to restrain interstate and foreign trade by prohibiting the movement of large supplies of gasoline and other unpatented commodities and to secure to the Standard Oil company of Indiana "a virtual monopoly of trade and commerce in gasoline in the fifteen states defined in the agreements as 'Indiana company territory.'"

Working For Year.

Agents of the department of justice have been busy for more than a year in working up evidence which culminated in the suit and it was made known today that Mr. Stone felt the department had built up its case to the point where it could go into court without fear.

The attorney general took up the gasoline case immediately upon assuming office and has given much of his time to the task of solidifying the government's position.

When the attorney general came into office he found before him the appeal of several northwest governors for cheaper gasoline, as well as the results of the department's own work in the case and the findings of the federal trade commission, which inquired into the subject at the behest of President Coolidge. The president had been appealed to directly by Governors McMaster, of South Dakota, and Bryan, of Nebraska.

It was stated, however, that the department proceeded on the basis of its own evidence, which it considered more complete than that gathered by other agencies.

Chicago, June 25.—Besides alleging violations of the anti-trust act by the Standard Oil company and others, a half hundred in all, the bill in equity filed here today by the government seeks to set aside many of the contracts between the defendant companies alleged to tend toward monopoly and in restrain of trade.

The complaint was prepared by the department of justice at Washington and forwarded here to United States District Attorney Edwin Olsen, who filed it in United States district court coincident with the announcement from Washington.

The new suit recalled that for alleged infringement of patents brought by the Universal Oil Products company, of Chicago, against the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, pending since 1916 in federal court in Missouri, damages aggregating between $600,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 were asked.

The government suit also is the most far reaching action involving the oil industry since the famous anti-trust suit begun at St. Louis in 1906 against the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey in which the supreme court in 1910 upheld the decision that the holding corporation was an illegal combination and its dissolution was ordered.

In 1907 the Standard Oil Company of Indiana was fined $29,000,000 by former Federal Judge K. M. Landis as a result of indictments for rebating in connection with shipments with its products. The fines were declared illegal in the higher courts and a "not guilty" verdict was returned at a second trial.

MISTAH SPEAKAH

Mistah Speakah—

Message from the press—

We offer a privileged resolution calling on both houses to do as little work as possible during the session just begun.

For it is hot weather, and life in Georgia in the summer time is too delightful to allow strenuous legislative worries to disturb our peace.

It was apparent early Wednesday morning, listening to carridor conversation, that there are not many members of either house who are not running for office of some sort "down home." Most of the senators are seeking places in the house; many of the representatives want to be senators; some are aspiring to the national congress and others are after one political job or another. Of course, there are exceptions. Some have had enough service for the "peepul" and are ready to thank the constitutional limitation of two years to a term.

But those running for office will weigh the effect of their votes on the various measures to come up, more carefully than ever. For what is the use of a hard working solon to vote for a good bill, if his constituents are going to disagree with him and vote him out of the job for doing so?

It is already rumored that Representative Culpepper, of Fayette county, will be a candidate for speaker of the house next year. He refused to commit himself on the issue one way or the other when asked the question direct.

Many of the candidates, including Herschel Elders, governorship aspirant; L. J. Steele and Frank Holden, would-be congressmen; A. J. Woodruff and O. R. Bennett, seeking public service commissionerships; Carl Guess, Craig Arnold and a score of others ambitious to reach the state senate are regretful that they cannot, for the next 50 days, mingle with the voters in the state or their own districts. However, they are hopeful that by close attention to the welfare of aforementioned voters in the assembly that their good work will not be overlooked and that they will be given the opportunity of making up for lost time when the legislature adjourns.

There are a few sensations looming in the offing. One or two startling developments are due in the next few weeks. A shock will be administered to some worthy citizens before the session is over.

But, aside from the above indefinite warning, it may safely be predicted that the legislature this year is going to lead a quiet and respectable life—comparatively speaking.

In the meantime—

Mistah Speakah—

SEVEN MULES KILLED BY LIGHTNING BOLT

Fort Valley, Ga., June 25.—(Special.)—J. W. Pearson, of Lee Pope, seven miles from Fort Valley, prominent farmer and fruit grower, lost seven mules Tuesday afternoon by lightning, during a brief thunder and rain storm.

Negro farm hands came out of the field during the rain and put nine mules under a shed and the hands went across the road into a negro house to remain till the shower was over, when a stroke of lightning struck the mules, knocking all nine down and killing seven of them immediately. The other two were stunned but finally got up and seem to be all right.

KRYPTOK BIFOCALS

The Ballard Make

They are a combination of glass allowing you to see both near and far with one solid glass. No removing your reading glass to see distant objects, no seams, lines or blisters to worry you or attract attention of others to your age. Absolutely invisible while on the face they have proven a revelation to thousands who have come to us for them. Why are we successful with Kryptoks? Because, we are extremely careful in the examination of your eyes, the correct grinding of the glass, and perfect adjustment of frames to each individual face, all of which is absolutely necessary to insure comfort and appearance. If you have Kryptoks bought elsewhere and cannot use them bring them to us and we will find the trouble. Ask the better oculists or any of our patients what the Ballard service is to the public.
